

Nanking Next Major Target As Japs Land More Troops

Chinese Fear Attack on Hangchow as First Step in Drive

TRANSPORTS ARRIVE Remnants of Chinese Army Still in Nantao In Shanghai

Shanghai—(AP)—Japanese reinforcements landed on the south and north shores of Hangchow bay today for what may become a major drive toward Nanking, China's capital.

Chinese feared the reinforcements would attack Hangchow as the first step in a Nanking drive, now that Shanghai is in Japanese hands—except for Nantao, native quarter in which are remnants of the Chinese army which retreated from Shanghai yesterday to defense lines further inland; and the international settlement and the French concession.

A few Chinese also were holding out in Footung, industrial center across the Whangpoo from Shanghai.

Japanese utilized airplane and artillery bombardment today in an effort to drive out the remaining Chinese.

Many bombs fell along the Nantao Whangpoo river waterfront, within a few hundred yards of American and other foreign war vessels anchored in the river.

40,000 Soldiers Arrive
Chinese said 34 Japanese transports already had arrived off the Chekiang coast in the new Hangchow move, carrying approximately 40,000 soldiers. Capture of Hangchow would cut one of the two railroads now open between Shanghai and the capital.

Shanghai harbor, off the French concession, tonight was the scene of a bitter machine-gun battle between Japanese war craft and Chinese troops on both banks of the Whangpoo.

At nightfall three Japanese vessels joined the efforts of their land forces to expel the Chinese from Nantao.

The renewed shelling of the Shanghai area followed a Japanese announcement that Nantao would be bombarded unless the Chinese troops, variously estimated to number from several hundred to several thousand, withdrew.

Civilians Leave
The Japanese shells and bombs probably took a smaller toll of life than might have been expected because of wholesale evacuation of civilians from Nantao within the last few hours.

The bombs and shells started fires in parts of Nantao before the brief attack ended.

A detachment of marines landed from the French flagship, the cruiser Lamotte Picquet, to strengthen French forces manning the borders of the concession. French troops

11,000 Return to Work At Hudson Motor Plant

Detroit—(AP)—Eleven thousand employees of the Hudson Motor Car Co. idle yesterday because of a labor dispute, returned to work today pending final settlement of differences between the company and the United Automobile Workers of America.

The Bohn Aluminum and Brass Corp. Plant No. 2, also involved in labor difficulties, remained closed.

A spokesman for the U. A. W. A. said the Hudson company had agreed to re-time operations in the paint department where the dispute centered yesterday.

The Bohn No. 2 plant was closed at 3 p. m. yesterday. Apparently the major point in the dispute was international disease law.

The day shift remained in the plant to prevent the night shift from going to work.

It was the sixth time this year that a unit of the Bohn Corporation has been closed by a strike.

A Word to Sap Is Insufficient

A sign "Hat-check girls and cigarette girls are not allowed to keep tips" but must hand a "kick-back" to their employers is to be displayed in night-clubs, cabarets and hotels in Massachusetts. Papers quote State Senator Blanchard that the purpose is "to make a sap realize that he is entirely a sap." Hm. That's impossible. And persons who are business-wise need no such signs. Merchant Marine Program Facing Strong Opposition

Three Major Portions of Commission's Plan Are Under Fire

Washington—(AP)—Opposition was developing today to three major portions of the maritime commission's program for restoring what it termed America's "very sick" shipping industry.

The biggest dispute may result from a recommendation for a mediation board to handle maritime labor problems. The commission said a solution is essential to continued existence of the merchant fleet.

The other controversial proposals were:

That the commission be given responsibility for developing trans-oceanic air travel.

That the ban be lifted against construction of American ships abroad if savings would result.

The commission outlined its program last night in perhaps the most comprehensive survey ever made of American shipping.

May Build 65 Ships
There is prospect, it said, that private companies may build 65 new cargo ships in the next five years. They would cost $137,000,000, of which the government would pay more than $50,000,000 in subsidies.

If shipping falls off or if the companies fail to raise enough capital, the commission said, the government itself must build ships to meet foreign commerce and national defense requirements.

Contemplated replacements fall short of the number of ships ready to retire from service. Of 155 vessels in the subsidized fleet, 131 will be obsolete in five years. Of 1,422 vessels of all types in the nation's entire sea-going merchant fleet, 1,305 will be obsolete in five years.

These aging vessels are what remain, the commission said, of the "magnificent armada" of merchant ships which America had in 1922.

In the age of vessels the commission noted one of the causes of labor troubles—cramped quarters. For allowing these to exist, for paying seamen poor wages, and for giving them generally poor working conditions the commission blamed ship operators.

Brussels Awaits Japanese Reply

Peace Conference Adjourned to Saturday Pending Arrival of Note

Brussels—(AP)—The Brussels conference today adjourned until Saturday after Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Spaak announced that Japan's reply to the conference's peace note was expected by that time.

Spaak, chairman of the conference, said the latest information from the Belgian ambassador in Tokyo, Baron de Bassompierre, was that the reply would be decided upon at a meeting of the Japanese cabinet Friday.

He added that the text of the note probably would be communicated to the various delegations here Friday night.

The conference, paid impressive tribute to the memory of Ramsay MacDonald, former British prime minister, who died yesterday. Representatives of all the major powers, including Norman H. Davis, head of the United States delegation, joined in stressing MacDonald's work for world peace.

Private conversations between heads of the British, French and United States delegations on ways and means of restoring peace to the Orient were held today.

Three statesmen, Davis of the United States, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and the French foreign minister, Yvon Delbos, met in Davis' hotel room, talking for more than an hour, and then lunching together.

U. S. Seeking To Stimulate Home Building

May Help Private Interests Push Housing Construction

NO 'HEAVY SPENDING'

Roosevelt Firm in Intention to Balance Next Year's Budget

Washington—(AP)—Stimulation of heavy private investments in housing construction developed today as one means the administration may seize upon to aid business and employment.

President Roosevelt called federal officials and private business men to discuss the possibilities with him this afternoon.

White House attaches, emphasizing any new undertaking would be apart from the government's slum clearance and low-cost home building program, said the conference would be concerned with methods of inducing private capital into the housing industry.

The impression prevailed that suggestions for general increases in government spending, as an aid to business, would get nowhere.

The president's reiteration at his press conference yesterday that he intended to balance next year's budget led informed observers to believe there was little prospect of more federal pump-priming.

Afternoon Conference
The group called to the White House for an afternoon conference has been making a study of housing possibilities for the president.

It included Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the federal reserve board; J. M. Daiger, special assistant to the board; Robert E. Wood, president of Sears-Roebuck; Edward F. McGrady, director of labor relations of the Radio Corporation of America; and Gerard Swope, president of General Electric Corporation.

The conference followed one late yesterday with Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, at which it was understood the same subject was discussed.

Secretary Morgenthau may bare some of the administration's intentions in relation to present business conditions in a speech at New York tonight.

He has indicated this speech, on "pump priming," might be an official answer to advocates of heavy federal expenditures to offset any slowing in the business pace.

He continued, meanwhile, his study of economic developments, with conferences on taxes, spending, relief and allied topics. Into these he dropped a hint that the public utility industry might want some federal assistance, if it would change its system of evaluating property.

U. S. Is Studying West Indies Rift

Washington Ready to Offer Guidance if Peace Is Threatened

Washington—(AP)—The state department endeavored today to ascertain the facts in a dispute between Haiti and the Dominican Republic to determine whether the help of the United States is needed to restore good will.

Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, said this nation has no desire to intrude on domestic affairs of the two West Indies countries but that if peace is menaced, it has the right to offer guidance.

The dispute was said to have originated in "border incidents" resulting from Dominican clashes with Haitians who left their own overcrowded country in search of work across the boundary.

George Leger, foreign minister of Haiti here to protest the situation, said from 3,000 to 5,000 of his countrymen had been killed on Dominican territory since Oct. 5. Dominican officials have said the casualties have been few and that the situation was exaggerated by political enemies of the administrations in both countries.

Welles said yesterday he hoped direct negotiations between the two nations would settle the situation, and President Roosevelt echoed this wish.

5 Boys Arrested After Frightening Motorists

Racine—(AP)—Five Racine youths gave that "man on the street" phrase a new turn last night with the aid of a clothing store dummy.

The boys frightened motorists into all sorts of wild driving gyrations by throwing the dummy in front of cars. One driver lost control of his car, which jumped the sidewalk. No one was injured.

Police put an end to the "game" by apprehending the youths, all of whom face delinquency charges.

Higher Freight Rates Boost U. S. Coal Bill

Washington—(AP)—The National Coal association estimated today proposed railroad freight rate increases would boost the nation's coal bill $45,000,000 a year. The association's executive committee voted to oppose a 13 per cent increase for coal.

Mexican Tells How He Fought Off 80 Cowboys in Old Days

Houston, Texas—(AP)—Grey-haired Elfigo Baca, attorney, stood up at the campfire to tell how two-gun man Elfigo Baca, single-handed, stood off 80 cowboys 33 hours in the days when the west was at its rip-roaring.

When the battle was over, four cowboys lay dead and eight were wounded. Baca had been dynamited out of the adobe hut where he barricaded himself, but still refused to surrender his six-guns.

"That was a big battle," Baca today told the National Frontiersman's association, whose members are both former United States Marshal and "bad men" of the wild west.

"These men—they were tough. They took a Mexican boy and mutilated him," the attorney gave as his motive for a lone battle for vengeance.

"Elfigo," remarked Al Jennings, "these boys just couldn't shoot." Jennings was a train and bank robber.

Loot Weyauwega Safe; Attempt to Break Into Second

Two Offices Entered During Night; Loss Undetermined

Weyauwega—(AP)—Offices of two Weyauwega firms were entered last night and an undetermined amount of money was stolen from a safe in the Clark Fuel and Lumber company. An attempt to rifle the safe in the Weyauwega Union Products company was unsuccessful. Fingerprints were taken after the burglaries were discovered by employees this morning and police said they were following several clues.

Entrances were made through windows on both cases and the door of the fuel company safe, which officials of the fuel company said contained more than $100, was blown off with its contents strewn about the floor. The combination on the safe in the products company office had not been removed but apparently it had not been opened.

Harold Clark is the owner of the fuel company. Officials of the company said the loss could not be determined. Alfred Kosanke is manager of the products company, a fuel and grain concern.

The burglaries were discovered by employees, Carlton Cheek at the fuel firm, and Harold Munch at the products firm, when they went to work this morning. Sheriff D. W. Campbell, Undersheriff Walter Jones and Roy Myhill, traffic patrolmen, are conducting the investigation in conjunction with Weyauwega police.

3 Arrested in Probe Of Bancroft Robbery

Stevens Point—(AP)—With three young men taken into custody and brought to the county jail where they are being held without charge, investigation of the Bancroft robbery of Monday afternoon was continuing today. Working with sheriff's officers in their investigations are C. O. Hanscom of Minneapolis, a special investigator for the American Bankers' association, and two men from the Milwaukee office of the federal bureau of investigation, department of justice.

Two young men and an automobile were brought to the jail Tuesday night and a third man was brought in early this morning. The holdup was committed by two men, according to Bancroft reports, were seen about Bancroft earlier Monday. The seized car resembles the auto used by the robbers.

Kills Large Bear After Raids on His Bee Hives

Wausau—(AP)—Joseph Garre, who operates a large apiary in the town of Easton, Marathon county, had been missing honey from his bee hives for a long time. He had an idea a bear was to blame.

When three hives were tipped over last night, Garre related yesterday, he got his clue and tracked down a 400-pound male black bear, 7 feet long. Garre's first shot felled the bear. Several more were needed to complete the job.

Rancher Believed Dying After He Kills Robber in California Home

Santa Rosa, Calif.—(AP)—A story of a gruesome, deadly duel between a 79-year-old rancher armed with an old, rusty sword and an intruder, brandishing a butcher knife, was pieced together by officers today from the survivor's gasps.

Thomas Elliott, the rancher, cut off the intruder's left hand, but finally was overpowered. Surrendering, he promised to get his money. Instead, he grabbed a gun, killed the invader with one shot.

Elliott was so critically wounded hospital attendants gave him little chance to survive.

Sheriff Harry Patterson reconstructed this story of the grotesque battle:

Answering a knock at the door of the house where he lives alone, Elliott was confronted late last night by a hooded intruder, holding a flashlight in one hand and a butcher knife in the other.

"This is a robbery," the hooded man said. "I want your money!" Elliott fled upstairs grabbed the old sword from its scabbard on the wall and wheeled to battle his assailant.

They duelled about the room and battled down the stairs. A sudden swipe of Elliott's sword cut off the stranger's left hand. The stranger stooped, picked up the hand, stuffed it into his pocket.

Then, despite loss of his hand, the intruder suddenly overpowered the elderly rancher, threw him to the floor and waved his butcher knife menacingly.

"I surrender! I'll get the money!" the rancher shouted. The man let Elliott up and attempted to stem the flow of blood from his arm.

Elliott stumbled toward a cupboard. But instead of cash, he grabbed a gun, turned and fired. The invader dropped dead.

Elliott staggered a quarter of a mile to the home of his nearest neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schilling.

Sheriff found the stranger's body in the wildly disordered room. The man, about 50, was plainly dressed. Patterson suggested he probably was a rancher or workman in the district.

The hood over his head was a burlap sack with slits for the eyes.

Road Budget Of $128,115 Is Asked for 1938

Committee Favors Extra $100,000 for Highway Oiling

HEAR CITY REQUEST

Appleton and Kaukauna Seek Police Radio Equipment

The county board this morning heard the report of the county highway committee recommending a budget of $128,115.85 with an additional appropriation of $100,000 for an oiling program. It also heard requests of the Appleton and Kaukauna city councils to equip their police departments with police radios and connecting them with the county system.

Last year the highway committee recommended a budget of $123,193.40, but several other items were included later by the board and the final amount set was $131,339.46 as compared to the $128,115.85 recommended for 1938.

Appleton's request made last year for $50,000 to paving connecting streets with the county trunk system in the Fourth ward, and on which action was deferred several times, was again brought up but referred without discussion to the highway committee to report back Saturday morning.

Accept Report
The highway committee's report was accepted, and the requests of Appleton and Kaukauna for police radio equipment were referred to the highway and police radio committees.

An appropriation of $1,000 was asked by the Seymour Fair and Driving Park association and the request was referred to the executive committee.

Blair, top paving of connecting streets with the county trunk system in Kaukauna at an approximate cost of $6,000 was asked by the Kaukauna city council. The request was referred to the highway committee.

The paving would connect County Trunk Z with Highway 55 on Tenth street, old Highway 41 with Highway 55 on Desnoyer street, and County Trunk Z with the Wisconsin State Highway 55 on the island. The request also included paving of County Trunk Q from Cleveland avenue to the east city limits.

Arson Charges are Due To Reach Jurors Today

Green Bay—(AP)—A circuit court jury this afternoon was to receive the case of the Albin, roadhouse operator, charged with setting fire to his property, the Club Seville, northeast of Bay Beach, last May. Testimony closed this morning.

Albin did not take the stand but the defense introduced testimony intended to refute the state's claim that the blaze apparently had been caused by half a dozen separate fires. It was pointed out that the high value contents of the place were not in the fire zone.

Leo Vandreul, deputy attorney general, today joined A. G. Hawley, assistant attorney general, in prosecution of the case for the state fire marshal's department.

Mrs. Heisz Bound Over On First Degree Charge

Prairie du Chien, Wis.—(AP)—Mrs. Moll Heisz, whose husband, Edward, was found dead of a shotgun wound in their Eastman township farm home the morning of Sept. 2, was bound over to circuit court on a first degree murder charge today after a hearing before County Judge Jeremiah O'Neill.

Mrs. Heisz, whose 12 children are being cared for by a neighbor at Bell Center, was held without bond. The date for her trial will be set Nov. 15, the opening date of the circuit court session.

Britain Pays Tribute To Ramsay MacDonald After Death on Ship

James Ramsay MacDonald, former premier of Great Britain, died last night aboard a South American-bound ship. Death was attributed to heart disease, after a long period of poor health.

Britain Acts for American Support On World Issues

Seeking Closest Cooperation With U. S. Since World War

London—(AP)—The British government today was seeking its closest cooperation with the United States since the World War, advocating a "hand-in-hand" policy in the Far East and elsewhere on the troubled world diplomatic front.

The strong movement apparently was the outgrowth of President Roosevelt's Oct. 5 Chicago address, which encouraged Britain, after close scrutiny, to believe the Washington government might relax somewhat its traditional policy of isolation.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who in a speech at Birmingham Oct. 8 had welcomed the Roosevelt plea for concerted action for peace, went a step further last night in a speech at Guildhall, calling for fuller British-American collaboration.

The prime minister hailed the United States' participation in the current Far Eastern peace conference at Brussels as a "first and most valuable step toward fulfillment of the long-cherished aim of President Roosevelt at Chicago, concerted effort by peace-loving nations for sanctity of treaties and settlement of differences by peaceful means."

"We are convinced that closer understanding and more complete community of purpose between our two nations may do much to assist the cause for which the president has pleaded and which also is nearest to our hearts," Chamberlain said.

Embezzler Sent To Taycheedah For Theft From Store In 1933

Madison—(AP)—Attorneys in the federal government's gasoline price-fixing case clashed today over questioning of an official of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Special prosecutor Hammond Chaffetz obtained from Charles Barkdull of Evansville, Ill., executive vice president and treasurer, information regarding the duties of Standard officials, among them President Edward G. Seubert and Vice President Edward J. Bullock, who are defendants.

Chaffetz asked Barkdull whether Bullock would consult with Seubert if the company were engaged in a gasoline buying program aimed at raising prices, which the government alleges it did in 1933 and 1936.

Weymouth Kirkland, counsel for Standard of Indiana, objected. He said the question was hypothetical and argumentative. Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone ruled that the question should be answered.

Barkdull said he presumed Bullock would consult Seubert in such a case, but added he knew of no such buying program.

Mine Fire Is Raging Under Scranton Area

Scranton, Pa.—(AP)—A mine fire swept on unchecked today 250 feet beneath a section of the city where live 10,000 of Scranton's inhabitants.

Engineers were helpless. They lacked equipment necessary to approach the white-hot mass of coal, fired by a broken trolley wire two weeks ago in the Von Storch mine of the Penn Anthracite Collieries company.

Mine inspectors said there was no danger at present to those dwelling over the fire area in North Scranton.

They added, however, that deadly carbon monoxide gas—odorless and colorless—might seep through surface breaks.

Classes continued in session at the new North Scranton Junior High school, attended by 1,500 pupils.

Laborites Point to Services Prior to Split in 1931

RETIRE LAST MAY

Conservatives Praise Him for Action During Crisis

London—(AP)—The death of James Ramsay MacDonald, the son of a poor Scottish farmer who lived to decline an earldom, divided Britain today in appraisal of his life.

Against those who lauded the three-time prime minister as savior of the nation in the dark days of 1931, there were others who regarded him as a traitor to the labor party he built.

The 71-year-old Scotsman, Britain's first labor prime minister and the first prime minister to visit the United States, died last night aboard a South America-bound ship on a quest for the peace and happiness he had failed to find in his unique, stormy political career.

He had sailed last Thursday in search of what he called "the most elusive of all forms of happiness—rest."

Body Taken off Ship
Death apparently was due to a heart attack following a long period of poor health. His daughter, Sheila, his sole companion on the voyage, messaged that the body would be taken off the ship, Reina del Pacifico, at Bermuda Monday and returned for burial either in England or at his beloved Lossiemouth, Scotland.

The two-room cottage where he was born Oct. 12, 1866, still stands in Lossiemouth.

Tribute came from all parties for the man who rose from that humble dwelling to No. 10 Downing street. But the tribute was of two distinct phases of his career.

Conservatives praised MacDonald's momentous action in forming a national government at the behest of King George V in the financial crisis of 1931—an action which cost him the friendship of virtually all his old labor and socialist colleagues.

But his one-time co-workers, who in 1931 had denounced him as deserting them "for the drawing rooms of the rich," today praised his work for labor before the great split.

Aloof and almost autocratic, MacDonald won the dubious title of "the most hated man in British politics"—for his pacifist stand during the World War and for his leaving the labor party to form the coalition government following the financial crisis of '31. He had become Britain's first labor prime minister in 1924.

Only six weeks ago the Scotsman who never accumulated wealth was bequeathed about $200,000 in trust by Sir Alexander Grant, a biscuit manufacturer and close friend of the former prime minister.

After resigning as prime minister June 7, 1935, when he was succeeded by a conservative, Stanley Baldwin, MacDonald remained in public life until last May.

As lord president of the council he shared duties in connection with the abdication of Edward VIII last December and the coronation of George VI. Last May he gave up his office and was offered a peerage but declined the honor.

He remarked that he hardly could expect his north country friends, who had always called him "Jamey," to call a native of Lossiemouth "mildred."

Leaders of all parties in the house of commons planned a tribute at this afternoon's session.

MacDonald's daughter, Isabel, who accompanied him to Washington in 1929 when he and President

Corn Belt Cheered As Nation Returns To Export Trade

Large Quantities are Reported to be Ready For Shipment

Chicago — Corn belt farmers found a note of cheer today in grain market statistics indicating the United States was back in the world's corn exporting trade with a big volume ready for shipment.

Growers have watched corn prices drop to around the lowest level in three years while the value of hogs, which consume much of the nation's corn, has declined to the lowest point in more than two years.

However, with corn around 56 cents a bushel at market and hogs about 9 cents a pound, the readjustment in values, market experts said, has put domestic corn on a more favorable export basis. The same is true of hog products, they said.

Private estimates indicated that close to 4,000,000 bushels of corn already have been sold for export shipment beginning in December. Export prospects, traders said, were the best in eight years.

Last season this country was importing corn from Argentina and South Africa. Two serious droughts in three years reduced the nation's 1934 and 1935 crops to record-breaking small volumes for the last half century.

The United States is now in competition with Argentina and South Africa for the world's corn business. Traders estimated supplies available in foreign countries at approximately 120,000,000 bushels. Argentine supplies, estimated around 60,000,000 bushels, are lower than a year ago. Shipments from Rumania, major exporting nation in south Europe, have been prohibited.

The last sizable corn export trade this country enjoyed was in 1929 when approximately 33,775,000 bushels were shipped. Last year the total was only 324,000 bushels.

Seek Ways to Keep Fox River Clean

Water Pollution Committee Schedules Hearing For Oshkosh Next Week

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — Adolph Kanneberg, chairman of the state committee on water pollution, announced Tuesday that another problem has been scheduled for consideration at hearings in the Fox river valley next week.

The committee will meet at Oshkosh Monday to consider the problem of Fox river pollution from the sewage of two Winnebago county institutions and the Northern State Hospital for the Insane at Winnebago, which are now dumping their waste into the river, he said.

The committee proposes the construction of disposal facilities to handle the sewage of the institutions, but whether separate plants will be built or whether the institutions will be connected with the Oshkosh metropolitan system has not yet been settled. That question will be considered at the public hearing next Monday morning, Kanneberg explained.

On Tuesday hearings will be held on the problem of lower Fox river pollution, at Kimberly, and at Appleton. At Kimberly the committee will consider the proposed joint disposal plant for that village and Combined Locks, according to notices sent to the officers of the two municipalities.

Credits, Work Guidance To be Studied by Board

A high school credit system and a department for vocational counsel and education will be subjects of discussion at a meeting of the board of vocational education at noon tomorrow at the vocational school.

Because many students beyond high school age who do not have diplomas are interested, the board will consider a plan by which high school credits could be earned by the vocational school, Herb Helling, director, said yesterday.

The vocational guidance department would furnish information about work and working conditions and opportunities for students and direct their course in the school. If adopted, it would work closely with the Wisconsin State Employment Service.

Robert W. Luebke was reelected president of the club. Kirk L. Miles was named vice president, John Ash secretary, Peter Jung treasurer. S. C. Moore was reelected to the executive board.

Chinese soldiers near the French concession border indicated they had no intention of withdrawing. Before the general bombardment they had withstood an attack by Japanese snook troops and had declared they would resist until death.

See Puppet Regime

Chinese officials at Nanking apparently were resigned to a gradual withdrawal of Chinese troops from the Shanghai region to maintain defenses inland. They saw a possibility of a temporary lull in hostilities, however, explaining that Japanese probably would be busy consolidating their gains and establishing some sort of puppet regime at Shanghai.

Warnings About Southern Competition to Dairies Are Termed 'False Alarms'

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — The apprehension of Wisconsin farm leaders over the supposed threat of southern dairy competition, and the danger that Wisconsin's national position of leadership in the American dairy industry is imperiled by increasing milk, butter and cheese production in the far south is not shared by the state department of agriculture.

Experts in the department's employ repeat Hill's feeling. Although many of the southern states report formidable percentage increases in dairy production, they point out, there is no proof that there is a long-time trend upward.

One department economist explained that the federal government has encouraged the raising of soil saving crops in the south, including hay and pastures, which induced farmers in the southern states to begin raising of beef and dairy products. Many others, he explained, have turned to producing their own milk, butter and cheese supplies because of the condition of the cotton market.

According to Mr. Hill, "when the price of cotton goes up again, they'll sell all their cows and forget all about dairying."

Percentage Increases

The department's figures show that the south central states, which include Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas, have shown considerable increases in the percentage of their dairy production. But these states were producing very little cheese, milk or butter, the department experts explain, and a few thousand pounds may reflect alarming percentage boosts.

If the state's farm leaders want something to worry about, one of the department's statisticians indicated, they may watch dairy competitors nearer home.

In Wisconsin's own district, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio are making more cheese and producing more milk and butter than ever before, according to federal crop reports.

Indiana Second

Indiana, for instance, two years ago edged out New York state for second place honors in national cheese production, and in 1936 held that position. However, Wisconsin still holds a very comfortable lead, it was explained, producing annually 57 per cent of all the cheese made in the United States.

To Mr. Hill, the warnings about southern dairy competition are false alarms. "We aren't losing our leadership. Cheese is going up in price; we command the best markets in the country, and per capita consumption is rising steadily," he declared.

Hill admitted, however, that large dairy corporations are encouraging southern dairymen because production of milk in the southern states is cheaper. Farmers in the south receive 30 per cent less for their milk from the same consumers which buy Wisconsin milk, he said.

Besides, he added, southern producers cannot compete with Wisconsin's high quality standards. At a recent federal butter grading conference in Chicago, he recalled, southern butter representatives protested "because it is practically impossible for them to make even third class butter."

Alleged Slayer May Face Murder Charge

Glendale, Calif. — Paul Wright, president of Union Air Terminal, was held in suspicion of murder today pending a coroner's inquest Friday into the fatal shooting of his wife and "my best friend."

Wright summoned police to his fashionable home yesterday and showed them Mrs. Evelyn Wright and John B. Kimmel, operations manager of the airport, both dying. He said he shot them when he found them embracing.

Chief V. B. Browne said Wright had made a written confession that related:

"My wife looked up at me and smiled or sort of laughed, and then kissed Johnny on the lips. Everything went white hot. I got my automatic pistol. I don't know how many times I fired. I just recall pulling the trigger. I walked out into the night air; didn't even look back at them, and called the police."

"I guess this is just one of those things that happens to men who break. I had never suspected Evelyn and Kimmel. He was a perfect gentleman, one of my best friends."

Wright told authorities the shooting followed a night of drinking. He felt "dopey" and retired. Awakened by piano music, he said, he re-entered the living room to find his wife embracing Kimmel.

Fluorine in Drinking Water Topic at Confab

Green Bay. — The problem of eliminating fluorine from drinking water was considered today by state waterworks executives at the convention of the Wisconsin section of the American Waterworks association.

Since 1916 fluorine in drinking water has been suspected of mottling the tooth enamel of children up to the age of 8, executives were told by Dr. F. A. Bull, supervisor of dental education on the state board of health. He said an alarming prevalence of the element in Wisconsin drinking waters had been discovered.

F. K. Lindsay, chief chemist of a Chicago corporation, declared the element could be removed by percolating the water through beds of tricalcium phosphate.

State's Tourist Business Breaks Record This Year

High Gas Tax Returns, Fish License Sales, Reveal Income

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — J. H. H. Alexander, Wisconsin's director of recreational publicity, today pointed to a doubling in the number of non-resident fishing licenses sold in the last two years, and an increase in gasoline tax revenues of more than half a million dollars during five months of 1937 over last year as proof that Wisconsin is becoming the vacation playground of the nation.

With the tourist vacation season ending, Alexander pointed out that Wisconsin's tourist business this year was the greatest on record, and although statistics are difficult to obtain, it is likely that the entertainment of out of state vacation visitors has become the state's second industry, second only to agriculture, which continues to provide a living for more Wisconsin citizens than any other single occupation.

During May, June, July, August and September of 1937, the five principal vacation months, gasoline tax receipts jumped $578,249 over the same period last year, Alexander reported.

Using Popularity

Another index of the rising popularity of the Badger state as a place to spend a vacation, Alexander declared, is the number of out of state fishing licenses sold.

In 1935, when the state had not yet begun a national advertising campaign to attract tourists to Wisconsin, 65,000 licenses were sold. In January, 1936, the recreational publicity campaign was begun, and that year the total number of licenses paid for by out of state fishermen was 90,000.

Although final reports are not yet tabulated, the conservation department estimates that 1937 will break all records, and that at least 110,000 have been sold this year.

The state government now spends $75,000 annually to tell the world about its recreational resources, most of which is spent for space in metropolitan newspapers all over the country, and in the state magazines.

Publicity stunts, such as the recent "Battle of the Muskies" in northern Wisconsin are also a part of the state's scheme to make the whole country conscious of the attractions of Wisconsin as a vacation state.

Deposits in School Savings Bank Total $186.92 This Week

Pupils of Appleton public schools this week deposited $186.92 in the school savings bank, making a total of $9,323.90 on deposit for the children, according to the weekly report compiled at the office of Ben J. Rohan, superintendent of schools.

Of 1,732 pupils present in 12 schools, 708 deposited money. Following is the building percentage from each school and the amount deposited: Jefferson, 61 per cent, $16.40; Washington, 58 per cent, $6.07; deaf room, 56 per cent, 91 cents; Franklin, 54 per cent, $6.57; Columbus, 50 per cent, $12.65; Edison, 48 per cent, $28.99; opportunity room, 47 per cent, $7.57; Lincoln, 38 per cent, $4.73; Roosevelt Junior High, 33 per cent, $4.43; and McKinley Junior High, 31 per cent, $4.33.

The total percentage for all schools combined was 41. There were 10 withdrawals totaling $128.45 during the week.

Michigan Ferries Get Ready for Hunt Season

Lansing, Mich. — State ferries at the straits of Mackinac adopted a special schedule today to handle an expected rush of deer hunters to the north woods.

State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner said he expected a record volume of hunter traffic across the straits that would be 30 per cent greater than last year.

Augmented fleet, four state-owned ferries and one leased vessel, will be kept in operation day and night until the hunting season ends Nov. 30, the commissioner said. The northbound rush started today although the deer hunting season does not open until Monday.

Van Wagoner said a 30 per cent increase in hunters would mean 17,000 men and 6,000 motors would be ferried across the straits in the 21-day period of the special deer hunting schedule.

Firm Opposed to Coal Rate Change

Michigan Company Files Brief With State Commission

The retention of "port equalization rates" on bituminous coal shipped within Wisconsin is asked by the Central West Coal company, Menominee, Mich., in a brief filed with the Wisconsin Public Service commission.

The commission is investigating a proposal for the revision of tariffs on an upward "distance schedule" basis. The Menominee firm recently purchased river-front property in Green Bay and is reported planning a coal dock.

Practiced in this state for more than 50 years, the port equalization principle is in the public interest and makes for orderly distributive practices, the Menominee firm contends.

"This is an obvious attempt to secure a readjustment of rates for the purpose of monopolizing a great many of the most desirable dock coal markets in Wisconsin," the brief charges, alleging that a coal company of Green Bay "promulgated the theory of new rates."

Legion Will Make Clubhouse Out of Church Building

Deal Closed Yesterday; Post Will Meet There Monday Night

The purchase of a church building and parsonage at the corner of Superior and Hancock streets by the Onondaga Post of the American Legion was announced today by post officials.

The church building, formerly owned by the First Reformed church, will be used as a clubhouse. Legion officials indicated today that the parsonage probably will be sold later.

Following the transfer of the property, the executive committee of the Legion met last night and ordered a special meeting for Monday night. The meeting will be held in the church building and legionnaires will inspect the property.

The purchase was placed in the hands of a committee from the Legion a week ago. Members of the group are Raymond G. Kleist, commander, Earl Engel, George Peotter, Helm Hussner and Arthur Bunks.

The Legion today advertised for bids for re-shingling the roof of the church building and will open the bids Monday night.

Data Obtained in Job Census Will Be Confidential

Survey Information Will Be Used Only for Study of Problem

Unemployed or partially unemployed persons who fill out and send in cards for the national unemployment census, to be taken in Appleton between Nov. 16 and 20, need not fear that their names will be published or made public in any way, William J. Crow, chairman of the citizen's census committee, said today.

A pledge contained in all instructions sent to offices where the census is being taken follows: "The confidential nature of the answers to questions on the unemployment report card will be respected by the administrator of the national project."

Information given by unemployed or other signers of cards, Mr. Crow said, will not be used to their disadvantage such as in tax matters, questions of citizenship or relief. The data on the cards is to be used solely for the purposes of the census.

Instructions received by the chairman and his committee warned them to exclude from the census any supplementary enumeration or registration which might be imposed on the regular unemployment census by those seeking to take advantage of the government's undertaking for their own purposes. The main object in this national enterprise is to secure a complete, honest and accurate registration of unemployed persons in the nation.

IT'S ODD But It's Science

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

New York — Scientists are taking explosions apart to see what they are made of. They hope to make the world safer from explosions.

It appears that an explosion is not just one big bang, but a complicated process. One that killed three firemen in Pearse St., Dublin, Ireland, has just been analyzed by Kenneth C. Bailey, of Trinity college.

He discovered one new "part," which he reports in the British journal Nature. He found that coal gas, one of the very explosive mixtures, can extinguish flame without itself being ignited.

He set a cylinder of coal gas three feet from a six-inch flame. With a nozzle he blew coal gas from the cylinder across the flame. Sometimes the gas caught fire. At others it put out the fire. Professor Bailey got so expert he could work the trick either way every time.

It proved what had killed the firemen. In the Pearse St. fire a cylinder of coal gas had burst. But instead of burning, without damage, the gas from the cylinder blew a hole right through the flames around without itself igniting. Through this hole, it rushed into another room, expanded there into a terrifically explosive mixture, and a spark detonated it.

Observe National Milk Week From Nov. 14 to 20

Appleton will join in the observance of National Milk week Nov. 14 to 20, according to Claude N. Greisch, deputy health inspector. The week's observance was authorized in Wisconsin by proclamation from Governor LaFollette. Splendid dairy herds and grazing lands have made Wisconsin the leading state in the nation in the production of milk. The 180,000 dairy farms in the state last year produced nearly 11 billion pounds of milk.

Maurer Describes Visit to Europe

Beloit College President Is Speaker at Rotary Meeting

An Italian translation of the life story of Clark Gable, American bus trip tickets on sale in London, lottery tickets for sale at cathedrals, and the difficulty an American has in adapting himself to European driving regulations were subjects of anecdotes related by Dr. Irving Maurer, president of Beloit college, before the Appleton Rotary club yesterday noon at Hotel Northern.

Introduced by President Thomas N. Barrows of Lawrence college, Dr. Maurer related his experiences on a recent European trip.

"There are several things that we could adopt from Europe to improve our conveniences here," the speaker said. "The English postal service and the standardization of bridge phones throughout Europe are decided advantages over America." He also praised European traffic safety devices.

"But don't ever worry about taxes over here compared to Europe," he said, explaining that in Italy the city or town imposes a 10 per cent tax on visitors' hotel bills. Traveling with his family, Dr. Maurer witnessed the Coronation Day parade in London "for only 25 cents apiece."

Over 60 Farmers Attend Meet at Forest Junction

Henry Heimann Reviews 1937 Soil Conservation Program

Forest Junction—Reviewing matters pertaining to the 1937 soil conservation program, touching briefly on a local township committee of three members with two alternates, more than 60 town of Brillion farmers met in the town hall here Monday evening renewing the local unit of the Calumet County Agricultural Conservation association.

The meeting was held at the call of Martin Salm, Chilton, president of the county organization, who, however, was absent Monday evening, in attendance at the midwest farm conference being held that day in Indianapolis, Ind. Henry Heimann, Chilton, substituted as speaker of the evening. Though the meeting had been called for the purpose of presenting the 1938 program, Mr. Heimann was obliged to confine most of his address to a review of the 1937 program, as very little information, he said, had as yet been released for next year. An informal discussion was also held for drawing out suggestions in regard to a dairy control program by Wisconsin to prevent present non-dairying states from going too extensively into that industry in consequence of soil conserving practices.

The session was presided over by Edwin Seybold, chairman of the local township committee, who was again chosen for that position in the elections. Re-elected with him were E. A. Ruch and Hilbert Radtke, committee members, with Arthur Schnell and Henry Abel as alternates. Mr. Abel was newly added as alternate, there having been only one elected for 1937.

Lightning Kills 3 Cows; Owner Suffers From Shock

Forest Junction—Insurance companies are adjusting losses and the owner of the place is recovering from shock incurred when a bolt of lightning struck at the Robert Kloehn farm on route 1, Brillion, during the electrical storm which broke in this area shortly after 2 o'clock Monday morning.

Three dairy cows stabled in the barn for the night are believed to have been killed instantly when the bolt apparently entered the buildings by way of the electrical wiring. Light bulbs were shattered in the residence, fuses blown, sockets damaged, and Mr. Kloehn, who had gotten up during the storm, was partially stunned, and did not go to the barn at once to ascertain the extent of the damage there. At milking time in the morning he discovered the three dead cows in widely separated stalls, the animals in between being uninjured. A team of horses in the barn showed symptoms of being deaf when hitched up later in the day.

Excepting for the electrical wiring, no other damage seems to have been done to the buildings, Mr. Kloehn's injuries, manifesting themselves in a stiffness of joints, are believed to be only temporary.

STUDY-OR-FAY PLAN

Pittsburgh —(AP)—Lazzy students who fail to complete high school within four years should be charged tuition for additional instruction, in the opinion of Myrtle E. Wylie, Allegheny high school teacher.

Such an arrangement, she estimates, would save $140,000 annually to teachers in Pittsburgh alone.

President Seeks Advice on How to Stop Depression

Lawrence Says Flood of Deflationary Influences Has Started

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington — President Roosevelt has begun to seek advice on how to stem the tide of the new depression, but he has not disclosed how much of the advice given him will be put into effect.

Lawrence

In a sense, we are back to the psychology of November and December, 1929, when President Hoover was in the position of not knowing on all sides to "do something." He begged the utility and construction industries and business generally not to reduce payrolls and to keep up their spending programs. But he could not beat the tide of deflation which began to set in eventually.

Today, Mr. Roosevelt, with a lot more instrumentalities of government at his disposal than Mr. Hoover ever had, is being urged to "do something" and he, too, is receiving advice from all sides. Eight years ago, business men cried in chorus that conditions were "fundamentally sound" and that all that was needed was "confidence." Today business men are clamoring for such action on the part of the Roosevelt administration as will instill "confidence." Again the inclination is to blame the incumbent administration.

So far as the facts and figures are concerned, the new depression is, in some respects more severe than what the nation experienced in 1929 and 1930 because the decline has been so rapid. Thus, in only a few weeks, steel production has come down from 90 per cent of capacity to 40 per cent. Major operations of this kind cannot be dismissed as mere turns of a cycle. They relate to conditions far more serious than are contained in one industry or a group of industries. They are directly traceable to the difficulties encountered by democracies nowadays in coping with economic factors both within and outside their borders.

Deflation Started
It is a debatable question whether Mr. Roosevelt's intervention at this time can do much to stop the flood of deflationary influences that has started. He might have been more successful if he had acted three or four weeks ago. But the wait-and-see argument prevailed. The president is described by those who have been conferring with him as being alert to the dangers of the present economic trouble of the country, but not yet ready to act aggressively or decisively on all fronts in the emergency manner. Maybe five or six weeks from now the emergency will have been even more clearly defined and the country will again turn to the White House as it did in the bank holiday emergency of 1933.

It is not from the banking situation—which is absolutely sound—but from the unemployment crisis that the impetus will come. Men are being laid off right and left. The A. F. of L. admits a decline in figures of those employed, and the word from all sources is that the unemployment curve has started upward rather precipitately. The administration's plan—if, indeed, opportunity of any kind can be called a plan—is to encourage business activity in three directions—utility spending, railroad rate increases and the extension of credits to stimulate housing and construction generally.

Most significant, of course, was the president's discussion of the utility question. He gave the newspapermen the impression he would like to get together with the utilities and end the war between them and the government. He could do this overnight by telling the public exactly what his policy toward a $12,000,000 industry is to be. Mr. Roosevelt said, for instance, that the root of the difficulty was the matter of valuation of properties for rate making purposes. But there is something more—the question of government competition. The president referred to the right of municipalities to vote for public ownership, but he significantly omitted saying a word about the federal funds to connive with municipalities to induce them to throw out the private companies.

Until questions like these are met frankly, there will be no investment of funds by the public in new utility securities, and, without the support of the investors, utility spending is not feasible.

Federal Hearing
As for construction and the guaranteeing of loans for housing purposes, much can be done in this field. The right way, of course, is to carry forward the principle which the federal housing administration carried through so successfully, with the cooperation of the banks, in insuring mortgage loans. To use private banking facilities with the supporting hand of government agencies so that initiative can be developed and leadership assumed is to encourage the building industry at the psychological moment.

GRIN AND BEAR IT

By Lichty

"He's spoiled me for any other men."

But finance alone is not everything. Costs of material and labor have been skyrocketing. What will Mr. Roosevelt do to keep the labor factor from getting out of hand? Conceding that wage levels must be maintained or else purchasing power will be impaired, the problem is really how to keep certain trades from getting out of line and throwing the whole economic system out of balance. Here, if ever, is a chance for government to act as coordinator.

What Mr. Roosevelt needs at the moment is to select a depression council, or, if the word "depression" is to be taboo again as it was in 1929 and 1930, it might truly be called a national recovery council. It should consist of only a few men. Joseph Kennedy can handle the utility problem. Jesse Jones can handle the financial side of housing and construction. John Lewis and William Green should be drafted to handle the labor problem within their respective jurisdictions. Governor Eccles should be the fifth member.

These five men could work with the president, and, in a few weeks, change the whole national psychology. Thus Mr. Kennedy could approach the utilities and get them to agree to register under the public utility holding act, drop all litigation, and get a written assurance from the government that, while intermediate holding companies will be abolished, the "integrated" systems will not have to be geographical but may be based on financial premises.

The Government might agree to make no more loans to municipalities except on the same terms as are offered to private companies. A special agreement with TVA, reference to TVA can easily be worked out if a special act is introduced. Many practical plans have been proposed in the past, but now is the time for some of them to be worked out, because the country needs the impetus that would come from the spending the utilities need to do to catch up on their shortages of facilities. As for financing, Jesse Jones can think of dozens of ways to make capital turn over productively, and, if he were allowed to do it, he could handle the whole financing problem of the utilities, the railroads and other industries. Once the RFC stepped in, the need for government support would not be continuously necessary. Confidence would im-

ONE TROUBLE WITH YOUR COUNTRY

Steel is a heavy article of trade.

And right now it is the condition in the steel mills that is tripping and obstructing the normal, steady throb of commerce whose very irregularity will be felt on every farm in the country.

Men watch Steel's backlog with concern in their eyes.

This backlog merely represents orders for steel, orders from a thousand Appletons, orders that indicate that all these numerous cities throughout the nation are proceeding in the usual natural and healthy way or have found it impossible to do so.

For the thousand Appletons are not sending in orders in sufficient quantities.

One of the admittedly substantial reasons for this abnormal condition is Mr. Roosevelt's favorite law whereby he has practically prevented tens of thousands of little manufacturing plants throughout this broad land from using their funds for replacements and additions and compelled them to turn those funds out in dividends to stockholders so the government could get a much needed rake-off in the way of personal income taxes, forgetting all this time that stockholders in corporations do not buy steel.

A typical example of the paralysis created by the Roosevelt idea is depicted in any one of thousands of cases from which we select that of a little package manufacturing company that started in business in 1923 employing only seven people with a weekly payroll of but $200. This company was successful, probably due to good management, good workmanship and because it smelled a new market. All the money that it had made it plowed back into the business, not a nickel did it pay to stockholders. Gradually it had grown from 7 employees to 50, from a weekly payroll of $200 to $2,000.

But in the presence of Mr. Roosevelt's taxation ideas this company reports:

"We were forced to declare dividends far in excess of what conservative financing would warrant, absolutely preventing the building of a satisfactory working capital or reserves to take care of the normal ups and downs of business. The tax requires us to seek expert and costly advice and generally increases our cost of doing business. It creates a shortage of cash for the payment of necessary bills, and practically causes a complete abandonment of all plans for expansions or improvements. We are unable to grow as long as this method of taxation exists.

On the other hand the established concern, the one that has been able to prove over a long period that its business is reliable or that has had a sufficient breathing spell from politicians to plow back its profits until it has grown strong may ordinarily borrow through bond issues, if the sum is large, or through banks if it is in keeping with their loaning rules, enough money for improvements.

The business with blue blood is safe under the Roosevelt scheme, safe too from competition.

But the business that is illy clothed and illy fed and illy housed cannot even get the money together to buy what it needs because the tax collector forces its earnings through such a channel that he may grab a share for the government irrespective of what is happening to the business.

And that is certainly one of the material reasons why Steel's backlog is down, why in turn Steel is instilling other businesses the country over with fear, that constant and persistent enemy of all progress.

EDUCATION WEEK

Education week ought to satisfy the American people why they are where they find themselves.

The army and navy are our great bulwarks against attack but education, and the glorious products of intellects operated upon intelligence lines rise supreme in the protection of the nation.

Particular credit is given in America to Horace Mann because he expressed himself so vividly concerning the needs of general education and directed its course so capably during a long life. Every particle of income turned to Mr. Mann is devoted to a good purpose, not because of his demand for education but in the excellent way he managed and directed the growth and spread of education.

The credit for the American's insistent demand for learning may more accurately be placed on high. It appeared to be an inherent trait of our fathers, however poorly schooled themselves or not at all, to insist upon education for their children, correctly reasoning that those who must share some of the responsibility of government could not perform their tasks very well with untrained minds.

The benefits of education may generally be found in a greater toleration for the rights and wishes of others, a wider comprehension of the difficulties and problems that snare and trip, and always a profound confidence in the future that is bound to arise when men and women know that they are well prepared to answer its demands.

TREASON IN ESKIMO

Since Michelangelo gloated over his enemies by painting their faces on horned and tailed creatures occupying the deep caverns of hell in the allegories he created for the Sistine Chapel, and was sustained by the authorities despite the vigorous protests of those who were in fact immortalized, artists have assumed an independence of conduct and a license of profession not ordinarily dared by others.

Thus have developed the idea, amply watered and fertilized by the profession, that the man and the artist are separate being and, naturally, the man cannot be held accountable for any of the eccentricities of the artist.

Rockwell Kent is the latest member of this specially protected profession to arouse the wrath of many by his decoration of the Post Office building in Porto Rico in which he wrote an inscription in the little understood Eskimo language prodding the people of Porto Rico to revolution against the American government.

There is something impish and impudent about this act and impractical too unless we figure that Kent was trying to do America a favor by cutting Porto Rico off. Since this country does not use colonies for the purpose of milking them Porto Rico has been a great gainer by its connection with America.

Kent, we fear, has not noticed the distinction between fame and notoriety but has assumed that gaining the latter will eventually make for the former.

"Life is short and art is long," the oft repeated expression of an ancient Greek should always be given in full. To it must be added "Opportunity is fleeting, experience treacherous and judgment difficult."

To Mr. Kent might be quoted the ribald lines of one Kipling, to conjure over as he meditates upon his "Work of Art":

"We have learned to whittle the Eden Tree to the shape of a surplice-peg. We have learned to bottle our parents' twain in the yolk of an added egg. We know that the tail must wag the dog, for the horse is drawn by the dog. But the devil whoops, as he whooped of old: 'It's clever, but is it Art?'"

ICKES STIMULATES THE "TRAVEL INDUSTRY"

Mr. Ickes, the alert Secretary of the Interior, has established the United States Tourist Bureau at Washington to serve the travel industry.

For Mr. Ickes knows that there is such an industry as the travel industry and that it is a very valuable thing which America has studiously neglected.

Some years a million Americans spend a vacation in Europe. It isn't a costly affair. The expense will run from $300 up depending on how elegantly one may desire to live or travel. The traveler returns after feasting his eyes on strange and interesting sights and gathering a world of useful information. He has had an outing he could afford and has improved himself from every standpoint.

He may not have realized that he has been part and parcel of a great industry that has helped raise European standards of living and that the dollars he has spent abroad have found their way back to America in European purchases of American products.

Mr. Ickes' purpose of encouraging foreign travel to America, and arousing the American's interest in that foreign travel, is just as important and just as praiseworthy as fostering or encouraging new industries with the added advantage that he may know that he is dealing with a natural condition from which nothing but benefits are likely to flow.

Opinions Of Others

MOONLIGHT AND POTATOES

Some farmers swear by it. But the Smithsonian Institute says "It ain't so." A poor potato, bean or tomato crop cannot be blamed on the moon it says.

Dr. Earl S. Johnston, plant physiologist, investigated the "superstition" that the moon affects crops. His experiments were principally with the effect on plants of polarized light, the rays of which vibrate in only one direction. Moonlight, according to the scientists, is sunlight which is polarized in being reflected from the moon's surface. He discovered there was no difference between polarized and nonpolarized light in the way in which plants turned toward it.

The farmer, however, might still be unwilling to accept the scientist's findings as inconclusive because of the nature of the experiment. Those who cling to their belief in the mysterious influence of the moon on crops and cater to her whimsically of light and dark moods, do so because old man Jones tried it out one time, himself. He planted his potatoes at the wrong time of the moon, and what did he get? Why, nothing at all. They themselves, even, tried it, and found that they could not afford to ignore the moon's varieties.

What has polarization got to do with it anyway? That scientific fellow up there at the Smithsonian didn't do the thing right. Let him go down on the farm and plant two crops, one in the right phase of the moon, and one in the wrong, then see what he gets. That's the only kind of experiment they will accept, because they are talking about the moon and moonlight. That polar light business might not be the same thing at all. No siree!—Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal.

APPLETON POST-CRESCENT

TOMORROW is Armistice Day, and somehow I cannot get too overwhelmingly excited about it. . . of course, it is the anniversary of an emotional high spot in American history and as such deserves recognition. . . at the same time I have only to look at the papers and read about what is going on in a military way about the world, the various intrigues, the growing military machines, and the loud shouts of the generals to want to punch my nose and make a face like something didn't smell good. . . Armistice Day nineteen years ago didn't mark the end of any war. . . it merely sent the current crop of soldiers home to raise soldiers for the next war. . . maybe we'll keep out of war — unless the politicians decide one is necessary to keep them in control — but there seems to be a feeling that we might stay out with difficulty. . .

Comes word that Prexy Roosevelt favors either Bob LaFollette or Fiorello LaGuardia for president in 1940. Passing by the La-La gag possibilities in this setup, it is my purpose today to suggest to the Democrats just where they may be standing within the next three years.

On the outside, perhaps, looking in.

It remains to be seen whether either the Southern Democrats or the Republicans are enough of a force to step in and take advantage of the possibilities that such a situation would offer.

With due thanks I must refuse publication to the anonymous contributor who dispatched the Readers Digest clipping about the form of printing that alternates lines so that you read the first line from left to right, (according to custom) and the second from right to left (not according to custom), alternating all through the printed matter.

The linotype operator has enough trouble figuring my stuff out as it is. Besides, the paragraph submitted appeared in another monthly before R.D. picked it up. It's been pretty well circulated already.

O. HENRY

It is said he had the title
For his theme before he wrote.
And from out the city's dim shadows,
Brought to highlights, a genius' stroke.

No one has given the meaning
His stress in "futility".
From the rank and file of broken men
Derelicts, to him, means humanity.

His gem, "The Gift of the Magi,"
Real gifts, with love divine,
Is seeing 'eye to eye' daily miracles,
Finding wine in the dregs of wine.

—Jane Patricia McCarthy

On Monday Congress comes to order and the following Saturday Wisconsin plays Minnesota. It looks like a bad week.

A Verse for Today
By Anne Campbell

SUNRISE IN THE WARD

The day begins with rattling trays,
And quiet nurses clad in white.
The patients turn their sleepy gaze
Outside where dawn is stealing night.
The trees are like big red bouquets,
The kneeling hills are wrapped in light.

The eerie whistle of a train
Proclaims the reason for the twist
Of smoke that clouds the window pane
With mingled gray and amethyst.
The patients look and look again
At sunbeams-mingled with the mist.

A banner hangs in morning skies,
And brings such beauty to the slope.
A dozen pairs of weary eyes,
Two dozen wasted hands that grope
For health, reach out to catch the rise
Of a new day with mounting hope!

NATURAL BREATHING

Last week we quoted from Haldane's "Respiration" (Yale University Press, 1935) the following:

The common symptoms or complaints of neuroathletic persons or those suffering from fatigue or shock are analogous to the exaggerated reflex restriction in the depth of breathing and the inability to hold the breath (as long as a normal person can, say 40 seconds). All these symptoms seem to be due to what Huggings Jackson called "release of control."

If Schaffer's method of artificial respiration (the prone pressure method universally used for resuscitation of victims of submersion, electric shock, asphyxiation with smoke or gas) is applied to a normal subject who voluntarily suspends breathing, it is quite easy to maintain a rhythmic flow of six quarts, per minute more or less, of air into and out of the lungs. That is the average amount of air breathed in a minute by normal adult at rest.

But if the subject voluntarily overbreathes, that is, takes regular deep breaths, but without violent effort, at the rate of twelve a minute for a period of 14 to 20 minutes, until so much carbon dioxide is washed out that apnea ensues—a period of a minute or more when there is no desire to breathe and no need to, and then the prone pressure artificial respiration is applied, there is a bound-like rigidity of the chest and belly muscles which resist the attempt to compress the thorax so completely that little or no air can be pumped in and out of the lungs—until the period of apnea passes and the natural desire and need for oxygen returns. This phenomenon is called the Hering-Breuer reflex (Hering and Breuer first noticed and described it) and it serves as a protection against over-breathing or over-ventilation.

The neuroathletic patient may feel that "he cannot expand his chest to breathe, just as if it were mechanically restricted and he develops symptoms which, with the frequent, shallow breathing, Haldane calls "asphyxial."

Right here I beg to quote from article printed in this column last year.

"When anoxia (oxygen deficit) develops in the course of an illness the intellect and the senses become dulled without the patient being subjectively aware of what has happened."

(This accounts for many inexplicable or irrational decisions made by ailing folk who are not incompetent in the ordinary lay or legal sense.)

"An individual in the earlier stages of anoxia may feel quite confident that his mind is clear and his judgment sound when in fact he is likely to behave in an unreasonable manner. His memory is impaired, his appreciation of time is altered. Understanding is impaired more than sensation. The subject sees without knowing what he sees. . . ."

"Great muscular weakness and easy fatigability are characteristic effects of anoxia, whether in illness or in mountain climbing (or in air-sickness when flying at great altitude, Nausea, vomiting, or loss of appetite occur rather when the anoxia is less gradual in onset, as in mountain climbing or flying. . . .)"

In "How to Breathe" (booklet in Little Lessons series, by William Brady, M. D., D. P. M.) you will find detailed instructions for the belly breathing exercise which I recommend for all who have an oxygen deficit. It takes many months of practice to unlearn unnatural breathing and to recover the habit of natural breathing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Climate

Can you tell me whether Streptococcus hemolyticus, causing sore throat, with some joint trouble, thrives in the southwest part of the United States as it does in the northeast? (E. T.)

Answer—According to recent investigations, patients with such infection get along better in the southwest. I believe it depends on how much time they spend out of doors, rather than on any mysterious effect of climate.

Regeneration Regimen

How can I obtain a complete copy of the Regeneration Regimen? I am approaching fifty and feel the need of some such rearrangement of my diet and routine. (M. H.)

Answer—Send ten cent coin and stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for it.

Your Birthday

"SCORPIO"

If November 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. m. from 1 to 3 p. m., and from 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m. from 5 to 7 p. m., and from 9 to 11 p. m.

You must be careful regarding the terms, or general conditions, specified in any document you are requested to sign this day. The pen is likely to be a dangerous weapon for those who wield it carelessly. Money will also be the cause of many cases of wrangling and bring about discordant conditions. It will be good judgment not to brush aside reasonable arguments or explanations. Many people will be inclined to act in a very unreasonable fashion, demanding that others do things that are likely to be impossible for them to do. Stick to the truth this day. You may do well in the long run if you are apt to be much better off for having done so. Married and engaged couples, as well as those going through the final stages of courtship, must be tactful in asking personal questions or in their demands for an answer this day.

If a woman and November 11 is her birthday you probably are very clever with your hands, and have the knack of making friends. You may do well in some financial undertaking or business enterprise, or socially. You ought to work well with other people, and whatever you have to do, you should be able to accomplish with little effort. If you have an ax to grind, you probably do it with finesse, and very seldom offend anyone. You must be slow in making promises, and very scrupulous in keeping your word. As a newspaper woman, interior decorator, political worker, lecturer, teacher, insurance or real estate broker you can, perhaps, be unusually successful. The chances are that married life will give you many advantages and much happiness.

The child born on November 11, as a rule, has many talents. Very easily in its youth it most likely will discover the secret of popularity and make good use of it.

If a man and November 11 is your natal day, if you are ambitious and never permit yourself to get into a rut, you will succeed. Engineering, law, architecture, art, writing, selling, inventing or manufacturing may provide the means through which you will become wealthy.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY GEORGE TUCKER

New York—Gangster funerals in New York seem a thing of the past. There was a time when a deceased gunman would be honored in the manner of a sovereign.

His funeral cortege, stylishly bedecked in automobiles, purchased gold-plated caskets, bought up whole floral shops and gave him a send-off unrivaled in Yankee graveyard statistics.

But those days went out with illegal booze. The rule now is to leave a fallen pal to the tender mercies of the coroner and potter's field, unless some relative intervenes.

Despite the many stage hits he wrote that earned him thousands of dollars in royalties, Robert Sherwood, the tallest playwright on Broadway, still thinks one of the best plays he ever wrote was one that was a failure and probably didn't profit a penny. That was "Waterloo Bridge," the story of the homesick American soldier who finds love and loses it again during an air raid over London.

Ironically, the first major failure on Broadway is in the lap of the Rockefeller, who have more money than anybody else. It was the lavish musical "Virginia" and it cost far more than any production on Broadway.

The International Casino, newest of the extravagant girl shows on Broadway, has frankly worried all the other big night night clubs in town. They admit their existence has been seriously menaced. Their one recourse is to produce bigger and better shows themselves, all in the super-Ziegfeld revue manner. Which, at least, gives the customer something of a break.

Somewhere to the West of Madison Square Garden is a block of red brick tenements, and almost all of the inhabitants are Irish. This might easily be designated as New York's Little Erin, except for the fact that you find the Irish everywhere else. It is probably a fact that you could walk through the town and every third man you met would be touched with the Blarney of Kilkenny.

Claiborne Foster's early forebears were governors of Louisiana. She is a contract bridge expert and writer, plays under pseudonyms. Sign in Billings, Mont., airport restaurant: "Ye who enter here on refreshment bent, shall welcome be and forthwith blessings sent."

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — One of the most solemn spots in America is the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Behind the scenes not all is solemn. Many a soldier marching patiently up and down before that historic granite block has preserved his monastic calm while his feet tortured him unmercifully and flies and mosquitoes pestered him.

The job of keeping guard over that tomb is a sacred job in the army, but it is no Sunday school picnic.

Here is how it is done. Nine men and three commissioned officers, a sergeant and two corporals, take over the job for 15-day tricks. In a quiet, cathedral atmosphere they march hundreds of miles back and forth in those 15 days.

One man at a time marches over a 30-yard course. He marches two hours and is off four hours. That parading goes on from sunrise until Arlington cemetery closes at night.

During his two hours on guard the soldier may speak to no one. He avoids meeting the eyes of anyone. He learns to look right through people. He never smiles.

Girls Bother Guards

The annoying part of it is that spectators try to get the soldiers to smile.

"Girls are the worst," said one soldier who had finished one 15-day stint and was glad to be through with it.

"Girls," he said, "stand right beside the path and smile and try to catch your eye. The corporal is right over there watching you. Sometimes so is the officer of the day. If they catch a guy smiling they burn him up."

The watch is maintained on a 24-hour basis, but after the crowds leave the soldiers don't march back and forth. They sit around near the tomb and smoke.

For the first few years the soldiers marched along the bare granite. Then a rubber carpet was laid for them to walk on so it wouldn't be so hard on the feet.

The rubber helps some, our soldier said.

But two hours of pounding over the same hard concrete makes a soldier's foot bone creak. He has to carry a gun on his shoulder. He can change the gun from one shoulder to another, but he can't carry it along in his hand, even for a rest.

Queen Catherine's Violet

Sun on the granite tomb and the white marble amphitheatre creates a blinding glare and, especially in summer, the heat is terrific.

HEARING ON RIVER POLLUTION

Editor Post-Crescent— On September 15 and 16 a large number of fish died in that section of the Lower River from Appleton to the Kimberly Dam. The cause was reported to the State Conservation Department and the State Board of Health and an investigation undertaken by representatives of both departments. As a result of this investigation a news story was published, seeking to give the public the impression that the thousands of fish had died because of a similar condition to that which existed some years ago from Lake Winnebago to Green Bay; lack of oxygen in the water.

It seems strange that this condition should exist only over a short stretch of the river and have its beginning after the water had passed over the Appleton dams and through numerous mill turbines which would add to the oxygen content of the water.

Evidently public indignation was not quelled by the news item and it was followed by another to the effect that the matter had been referred to the State Committee on Water Pollution. This committee held a meeting October 18, a month after the fish had died, and decided to hold a meeting of all concerned on Tuesday, November 16, in the Council Chambers, City Hall, Appleton, starting at 2 p. m., for the purpose of ascertaining the facts.

Postpone it another thirty days to give the public time to forget.

The State Conservation Department and the State Board of Health employ numerous wardens and sanitary engineers, presumably for purposes of law enforcement. Certainly the lay man may be pardoned for assuming that it was their responsibility to locate the cause and fix the blame in the class under consideration. Yet after an investigation by these law enforcement officials a public hearing is scheduled for a date still further in the future so that the departments "Can ascertain the facts."

Wouldn't that be a fine procedure for our "G" men and our police? Hold a public meeting two months after a bank robbery or a kidnapping and invite interested parties to appear and tell their stories. How the racketeers would welcome such law enforcement!

The decision to call that public hearing was reached October 18. The date, November 16, is close at hand. It has been given a minimum of publicity. Why?

Can it be possible that an old trick of the Conservation Department is being used to hoodwink the public? In the past when hearings were to be held at which small attendance was desired, announcements of the hearings were made in obscure newspapers published at the greatest possible distance from the scene of the proposed hearings. The evidence at such hearings always seems to have turned out exactly as the department heads desired.

"Stella Dallas" Inspires a Discussion of a Mother's Vital Problem

By MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

How Much Should a Mother Sacrifice? Mother love is a very curious thing. Some women are born mothers, even though they may never have children of their own. Some women, though they may bring into the world any number of children, never really understand a certain type of mother love.

I was brought up on the saying that few women are both good wives and good mothers, and therefore less to their children and more to their husbands, and the household revolves around them, while the husband and his interests are more or less neglected.

I believe that when one's children are really small a mother should give them the greatest devotion and attention. As they grow older, however, she should never sacrifice except in the big things which are necessary for the children's development. She has got to be able to live her own life after her children are grown and have turned from her to lives of their own. Therefore, it is important that she should not drop her interests completely, for she must not force them in later life to make too great a sacrifice for her.

In the big things I think a mother usually does sacrifice for her children, but I think she should always do it with her eyes wide open. For instance, many a woman whose married life has been unhappy has continued to live with her husband because of the children, and if both parties are big enough so that they can make the home atmosphere gracious, the sacrifice is probably worth while. If not, I think most children would agree that the home where ill feeling and constant bickering reign is no home at all.

Sometimes it is a question not of whether you should make a sacrifice, but of whether you can make a big enough one to make it worth while. A mother should remember that what sacrifices she makes, she must never expect to be repaid in kind, for probably the children will tell her some day that the sacrifice was not to their liking! She had best forget that she has ever made any sacrifice, and go through life on the assumption that what she does, she does because she wants to do it, and that as far as in her lies, she will give the children, while they are young, a wise discipline, and a great love. When they are old enough to get out and stand their own experiences, she will let them go, hoping they will return to her when they need companionship and sustenance and that she has given them strength and courage enough to meet the world on their own.

Youths Demand Well Known Books, PTA Group Is Told

Biography, Travel More Popular Than Fiction. Librarian Says

Neenah — Declaring that young people today are reading current and talked about books, more biography and travel than fiction, Miss May Hart, Neenah librarian, in discussing "Reading Habits of Youth" told parents and teachers at the Neenah High School PTA meeting Monday night in the school auditorium that young people must be recognized as individuals with minds of their own.

"With the exception of required reading for academic work, we can expect a student to read about 12 books a year," said Miss Hart, "and as librarians we must meet the demands of youth by selecting books which are about things in which they are interested, books that are easy to read and we must make it easy for them to draw out books."

"Nine or ten years ago when Book Week came into vogue, it was planned principally for children. With the depression, adult education and guidance was stressed but today, the charge is that we have been neglecting our young people and reading for youth is being stressed."

"There are two groups within the young people classification, those who know what they want and those who are known as reluctant readers because of limited reading ability or unpleasant encounters with reading. We found, in a recent survey, that of the seniors graduating last June from the local high school, six had no cards. We also found that when we transferred the eighth grade readers' cards to the young people's files as they entered high school, only half of those cards had been used."

"The home and parents are partly to blame for this, there is no family reading, voluntary reading is up to cease during high school unless the schools and librarians come to the aid. I believe too that the old fashioned habit of reading aloud would aid in awakening reading interest among young people. Parents and teachers too should try to read one or two books a month to arouse interest in reading among young people."

Miss Hart displayed and talked briefly about several new books in the Neenah library which young people will find interesting and entertaining. Among the group were "Let Your Mind Alone" by Thurber, "Elephant Dance" by Frances Flannery, "Stump Collectors Round Table" by A. L. L. L., "Wisconsin, Give Yourself Background" by Heasley, "Pulp Wood Editor" by Heasley. Among the books for parents were "What Books for Children?" and "Social and Religious Problems of Young People."

Mrs. N. C. Jersild, president, presided at the meeting at which Mrs. C. W. Nelson, program chairman, announced that the Dec. 13 meeting of the PTA would be under the direction of the men in the association. Mr. Jersild will preside at the meeting and Mr. Nelson will have charge of the program with men acting as hosts during the social hour.

Nov. 30 Picked as Date for Hearing On Bridge Petition

Plea for New Fox River Crossing to be Discussed at Neenah

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau) — Madison — Hearing on the proposed new bridge across the Fox River at Neenah and Menasha will be held at Neenah, Nov. 30, the state highway commission reported today.

Petition for the new bridge was forwarded to the state commission recently by the city of Neenah, and under the highway law, all such petitions require a hearing, a commission official explained.

It is expected that if the proposed structure is approved, a commission official said, that it will be financed jointly by the state, the cities of Neenah and Menasha, and Winnebago county, each contributing one-third of the total cost, which has not yet been estimated.

C. H. Kirch, bridge engineer for the state highway department, said here yesterday that the Winnebago county board of supervisors has been authorized to prepare plans for a new bridge across the Fox River at Eureka, to replace the present span which has been in poor condition for several years.

State highway department engineers now are investigating the feasibility of various types of spans, he said. Winnebago county highway authorities have been asking for a new Eureka bridge for some time, he explained.

Estimated to cost about $100,000, the construction would be financed by joint state and local contributions, according to Kirch.

Women's Field Army Head Tells of Cancer Campaign

Neenah — When Mrs. Frederick Clausen, Horicon, past president of Wisconsin Federation of Women's Clubs and now state commander of the Women's Field Army of the Society for the Control of Cancer, graciously declined the usual guest speaker check of $10, the Women's Tuesday club voted at its meeting Tuesday afternoon in Neenah library to donate that amount to the cancer control fund.

A resolution which would have increased the membership of the club from 70 to 75 was killed. Announcement of a Round Table Conference of Jews, Catholics and Protestants to be held in Neenah Nov. 17 was made by Mrs. E. D. Beals, president of the club who also announced the Twin City Emergency society Christmas gift sale at the home of Mrs. Nathan Bergstrom Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

Mrs. Clausen, who was guest speaker, gave a comprehensive survey of the beginnings of the Society for the Control of Cancer and the establishment of a women's field army with its purpose to bring into every home in the nation, an educational program about cancer control.

Raise $10,200 — Eighteen hundred Wisconsin women worked from January until the latter part of April in the Cancer Control Drive last spring and secured $10,200 for the fund, a sum which made the state medical society and society research doctors emphatically realize what organization women can do, Mrs. Clausen said. She discussed the aid the medical societies throughout the state had given in the drive.

Blanche McCarthy White, Appleton, is the district committee woman for this section, the speaker told club members, as she stressed the importance of the campaign last spring which made people conscious of the cancer control program work and laid foundations for work for next spring. Thirteen district meetings are to be held next year, Mrs. Clausen stated, with sessions with the vice commanders in the mornings and co-capitains and lieutenants of cities within the districts in the afternoon. Large public meetings are to be held during the evenings.

Mrs. Clausen discussed some of the questions which had been asked at the public meetings and talked briefly about the cancer research work throughout the world. A cancer research laboratory is to be established in Chicago, and an English surgeon and a Paris doctor are in United States now to assist with the establishment of such a research laboratory.

The cancer control program of education has taken the fear and mystery out of the disease and has given thousands of people new hope and a new idea of health programs, declared Mrs. Clausen.

The purpose of the tournament is to select outstanding players for the varsity basketball squad, while the other players who compete in the tournament will comprise the "B" cage squad.

Clemans Urges Tree Planting to Curb Water Loss

State Teachers College Professor Addresses Conservation Club

Neenah—Professor E. C. Clemans of the Oshkosh State Teachers college told 100 students and townspeople last night at a meeting of the Neenah High School Conservation club at the city hall that water level in Winnebago county and other parts of the state had decreased considerably, and unless the loss of water is checked the results will be disastrous in a few years.

The college professor of conservation made several recommendations, one of which could be done by boys on farms to check this decrease. He said that if ditches were blocked when filled with water the water would run off the land so quickly and would have time to seep into the ground.

Professor Clemans recommended the planting of trees, especially pine, fir, hemlock and ash, by high school boys. Armin Gerhardt, club advisor, later told the audience that the club is anxious to secure a tract of land in order to plant trees.

Professor Clemans pointed out that farmers having any land which they are not using should allow trees to be planted on it and the land will be tax free.

Discussing the need for water, Mr. Clemans said that the rain fall in this county averages 30 inches a year, and if it goes below this amount a drought results.

Mr. Clemans pointed out the amount of moisture taken from the ground," he said, and he quoted the amount of water which each person requires during the year.

The next meeting of the club will be held Dec. 14 with Indian lore as the theme. Exhibits will be displayed.

Mr. Gerhardt informed the audience that the 60 pheasants held by members of the club would be released this afternoon. Al Dunham, deputy state conservation warden, will supervise the liberation.

Plans were also discussed at the meeting for the winter feeding campaign.

Work of Welfare Group Shows 30 Years of Growth

Neenah—Thirty years ago this month, Mrs. James C. Kimberly, president of a year old Twin City Emergency society, signed a report of expenditures of that society for welfare work from Nov. 1, 1906 to Nov. 1, 1907, amounting to $133.21. Last week when Mrs. D. K. Brown, as president of the society, affixed her signature to the yearly report, the amount expended for welfare work in Neenah and Menasha from Nov. 1, 1936 to Nov. 1, 1937, exceeded that first year figure almost 30 times.

It is interesting to note that in that first year activity of the society whose vice president was Mrs. L. J. Pinkerton and whose treasurer was Miss Mary E. Hamilton, the welfare organization offered nursing care, furnished three layettes for local babies and sent 15 layettes to San Francisco for earthquake sufferers.

The welfare activity of the Neenah and Menasha society has been one of steady growth during those 30 years and today, the Emergency society not only endows a bed at Theda Clark Memorial hospital but has a substantial fund to which it adds each year for extras such as surgical dressings, drugs and medicines for patients using that bed.

The society donated $100 to Neenah Red Cross chapter and $100 to Menasha Red Cross chapter for flood relief last spring, purchased two surgical knives for the local hospital, paid for 23 maternity cases, hospitalization of 40 cases, 4 x-ray cases, three pairs of glasses, four trained nurses, 16 cases of cod liver oil given to the Twin City Visiting Nurse association for distribution, paid for food donated 12 families, furniture donated three families, clothing donated five families, milk for two families for 10 months.

Layettes were made for the hospital nursery and for the Visiting Nurses association.

Highway 41 Will Remain on State System at Neenah

State Commission Makes Decision Following Hearing at Oshkosh

Neenah—Highway 41 in Neenah on Winnebago avenue and into the Town of Neenah will not be abandoned from the state trunk highway system, it was announced today by the state highway commission, reporting on its decision made following a hearing recently at Oshkosh.

Part of the present Highway 125 near Neenah, however, is to be abandoned from the system. This abandonment was expected and not especially protested because the general traffic in that area will be served by the new Superhighway 31.

The commission's decision was as follows:

"The roads to be abandoned as a portion of the state trunk highway system are described as follows:

Beginning at the intersection of new U. S. The dinner has been an annual affair for years and is sponsored by the Lawrence College Men's club and the Appleton Chamber of Commerce.

Kuehle has written Big Ten and Packer football for many years. Annually he makes a visit to Big Ten camps and has devised a system whereby he is able to determine the strength of the teams at the various positions and compare one year's club with the previous year. He also broadcasts sports comments over the Milwaukee Journal station.

Lynch is not as well known as Kuehle but he is a keen writer of football and can give an intimate view of the sport from the standpoint of one who directs a sports program on a metropolitan newspaper. This fall he has attended many of the big games in the middle west aside from the Wisconsin game which usually is Kuehle's assignment.

Speakers in recent years have been football officials, coaches and last year Bob Elson, football and baseball commentator from station WGN, Chicago.

The annual banquet also features the awarding of numerals to Lawrence college freshmen, comments on the freshman season and prospects when the yearlings become varsity players next fall; awarding of letters to Lawrence varsity grid-players by Coach Paul Dorr with a resume of the season; and awarding of high school letters by Coach Wallace Cole and a review of the Valley conference season.

No Coalition in State, Young Democrats are Told at State Meet

Wausau —(P)—James Corcoran, Webster, state chairman of the Democratic Central committee, declared at the meeting of the state Young Democrats here last night that there will be a state Democratic ticket at the next election and that there will be no coalition with another party, unless that party joins the Democratic ranks.

He said the meeting should be the "opening gun" of the 1938 election drive, and a state wide membership drive. Corcoran asked the Young Democrats to campaign without thought of patronage.

John J. Boyle, Madison, United States district attorney, reviewed the emergency legislation of the New Deal, describing it as "good neighborliness enacted into law."

Others who spoke were Assemblyman Maurice Fitzsimons, Fond du Lac; James Cavanaugh, Antigo, state chairman of Young Democrats; and Frank P. Regner, Wausau, former chairman of the Marathon County Democratic committee.

Sponsors of Crop Control Hopeful Of Quick Action

Four Developments Indicate Change of Early
Passage in Congress

Washington —(P)—Sponsors of crop control legislation, seeking its quick enactment at the special session of congress, noted these developments today:

1. Impatient members of the senate agriculture committee said they would try to assemble the group to begin work on a bill immediately, without waiting the return of Chairman Smith (D-Ca.).

2. Wheat belt representatives said they would ask the house agriculture committee to include in its bill a guarantee of a wheat price that would at least meet production costs.

3. Informed persons said the administration is considering separating the crop control bill and the revenue measure which would finance it.

4. A new estimate of the 1937 corn crop was due at 2 p. m. (C. S. T.). Some officials said an increased estimate might add to demands for compulsory control of next year's production.

Agitation in the senate committee for immediate attention to farm legislation came from Senators Pope (D-Idaho) and McGill (D-Kans.), authors of a bill embodying the "ever-normal granary" proposal of Secretary Wallace. They said they would meet tomorrow with other senators interested in the measure.

Chairman Smith's office said he would not return until Sunday. He has expressed doubt as to the possibility of having a bill ready when the senate meets next Monday.

The house committee is farther along, but has not agreed on a final draft. Representative Burdick said he and his Republican colleagues from North Dakota, Senator Frazier and Representative Lemke, along with most of the Wisconsin and Minnesota congressional delegations, would ask it to insert the wheat price guarantee provision.

Propose New Name For Bellaire Park

Area May be Designated as Estella Reid Park, Board Reveals

Renaming of Bellaire park to Estella Reid park, if legally possible, was proposed at a meeting of the park board last night in city hall, according to E. B. Rachow, chairman.

A $10,000 gift, left to the park board by Miss Estella Reid, daughter of the late T. B. Reid, will be used to improve the park and to build a road from Rankin street to the river, it was decided. It was also proposed to name the road Estella Reid drive after the donor.

Mr. Rachow said the board thought it would be better to spend the money in one park and rename it, leaving a permanent monument to Miss Reid.

Members voted to raze the Zuehlke home on Prospect avenue if the house could not be sold or rented this winter. The building was turned over to the park board by aldermen at the last council meeting. If the house is razed, the west end of Pierce park will be improved.

Barbers Seeking Re-Enactment of Wisconsin Code

Some Opposition Is Expected at Hearing Before Commission

Madison —(P)—Barbers from various parts of the state appeared before the new fair trade practice commission today to ask re-enactment of the barbers' code which died with the temporary lapse of the code law between the regular and special sessions of the legislature.

The barbers were the first of nine industrial and service trade groups to ask revival of their old agreements. Commissioner E. Myrwyn Rowlands presided at the hearing.

While the first three witnesses to be heard were code proponents, the commission was informed there would be opposition from some barber groups, especially in lake shore cities.

Object to Regulations
A. A. Gooding, Fond du Lac, appeared as attorney for barbers of that city and Oshkosh who object to state regulation of prices and wages. The old code called for 50 cent haircuts, 25 cent shaves and $17 minimum weekly wages in cities over 2,500 population.

Those who spoke in favor of a code were Ed Ruenkel, Fond du Lac, Ernest Sheppard, business agent of the Milwaukee Barbers' union, and William P. Holz, Racine shop operator.

Ruenkel claimed that a cut rate price of 35 cents for a haircut requires a barber to operate his business below cost and demoralizes the entire trade. He said one Fond du Lac barber operating at cut rates had to go on the relief rolls to live.

Poltz said there was no cut rate shops in Racine, but he favored the code as good policy for the barber industry. Sheppard estimated about 100 shops in Milwaukee are cutting prices under cover.

'Noah' Will Open College Dramatic Season Next Week

Lawrence Students to Present Obey's Play
Nov. 18, 19

Noah, his ark, his family, and the animals that accompanied him on his famous trip all will appear in a new guise when the Sunset players of Lawrence college present Andre Obey's "Noah" on Thursday and Friday evenings, Nov. 18 and 19, at Memorial chapel.

Duplicating as nearly as possible the stylized production of the original New York company, the college players, directed by Eric Valkert, will use a type of scenery and costumes entirely new to the theater in the valley.

Trees, clouds and waves will be portrayed in highly colorful sets establishing a fitting background for the action of the play.

Obey is masterful in his depiction of Noah. He pictures him as a patient, God-fearing man who retains his faith in spite of the flood, who cheers his doubting wife and children when they become irritable and who calms them when they are frightened.

Finally, when the ship rests on land and all have deserted him, he against asserts his confidence in God. It is then that God sends the rainbow and Noah sets about destroying the ark.

Duke's Plans are None Of Mr. Green's Business

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—In all the idiotic farce of the Windsor Duke's ill-starred in to come among us and snap at a caviar canape in town of a triumphant woman, there is nothing more absurd than the swollen pretense of his feelings matter as he speaks for labor in the United States and the duke, of course, doesn't know the great all-American mushmouth as we do and undoubtedly was pressed by his title of president of the A. F. of L., which does have an all-embracing sound to the un-in fact, our Will himself, being no brighter than law allows, probably is sincere in his delusion of his own moist and mealy announcements on labor matter are the refined, official opinion of who told in the U.S.A. Among other truths which the cashed king doesn't know are the fact that Mr. Green's organization, by its exclusive policy toward people who want learn trades and join the union, restricts opportunity and tries to monopolize work; that it imposes tithe fees which amount to extortion if paid and to a boycott if not; it presumes to blackmail men from various lines of industry, even though they can beg, borrow or burgle the money, on the say-so of those who get there first and barred the gates in their own interest; that in Mr. Green's federation have been minuted by criminals of the un-world with no delicate aversion batting the ears off any member of the tenuity to ask for accounting of the graft, and, finally, it Mr. Green's unions, finding racket unrestrained by any enforceable laws, often set themselves as a private income tax authority, collecting tribute from thousands of rank-and-file workers whom the government, in its always fallible wisdom, has exempted in the true belief that they couldn't afford it.

II Making Politics ten He Sounded Off he duke, if he had ever taken real interest in anything besides the rim of his glass when he over here turning on the charm, tossing his golden curls, might have learned that there was more or by at least ten to one outside outfit which now has the dumb wotery to call itself American. And even since then, if his for knowledge had exceeded contents of the divorce register and La Vie Parisienne, he might have gathered that there was some of rivalry between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., both claiming to resent labor and both together in too much territory.

be sure, it is the right of any by impostor to pretend to speak all right-thinking people, all Americans or all labor in this country, and our Will was merely king politics, as they say in Europe, when he sounded off. But his outfit represents no more a half the organized labor, and that half of the grand total of who are engaged in the life to make a living here. It is a ruffian, incidentally, would less difficult if Mr. Green's were less aristocratic, greedy arrogant toward the new ups of people just coming out but the Duke couldn't be expected to know about that.

just how it comes to be Mr. Green's business or that of his federation if a guy wants to come over to stand inspection before his love-loving home folks and pokes his nose into a workman's dwelling so as to give his the appearance of a mission not appear in William's decree, our Will is like that. didn't occur to the duke that thing to this country is a simple matter of buying a visa and a ticket and slinging his satchel aboard a boat and that thousands of people do it every week. He had to use we weren't unrolling the rug, although he waived those nations when love conquered all, and it didn't occur to Will that was guilty of the same pompousness in the name of labor, too, presuming to disapprove or in the trip. Our Will has plenty answer for himself in his own it's outrages American labor he qualified to censor the little passenger lists. The nerve that guy!

ROVING STATUE TO REST After many vicissitudes and wanderings in Dublin, Irish Free State, the equestrian statue of King George I is to find sanctuary on English soil. The Barber Institute of Fine Arts in Birmingham has agreed to provide a home for it and to give Dublin a "work of art of similar value." The statue has lain on the tennis court in the back garden of the Mansion House since 1928. It was first erected on Essex Bridge in Dublin in 1722 to commemorate the visit of George I. In 1738 it was moved to the front of the Mansion House, then dumped in the garden during building alterations. Dublin's two other equestrian statues of kings were blown up years ago.

Cautions Farmers In Purchasing Red Clover, Alfalfa

Wide-Price Range Between
Adapted, Unadapted
Seed, Agent Warns

A caution to farmers to "know the origin of the alfalfa and red clover seed purchased this year" was issued today by R. C. Swanson, Outagamie county agricultural agent.

There is need for extreme caution because of the short supply of adapted seed of both alfalfa and red clover and the wide differential in price between unadapted and adapted seed, according to the bureau of agricultural economics.

It was stated that the carry-over of alfalfa seed was very small, that production in the northern and central states this year was much below average, but that production in the southwest was above average. The bureau said that much unadapted southern alfalfa seed probably will be shipped to northern states, some of it correctly represented as to origin, and some misrepresented as to origin. Because of the relatively low price of this unadapted seed, it was stated that "many retailers, shippers, truckers, and others will use every possible ruse to pass off southern alfalfa seed for northern seed."

Not Hardy
Though some southern-produced alfalfa seed may successfully go through mild winters in the northern states, it was pointed out that the southern seed is not sufficiently hardy to withstand the usual severe winter weather in most northern areas.

Farmers were advised that "alfalfa seed obtained from growers and shippers should be fully identified as to locality of production, and blends containing any portion of unadapted seed should be avoided so far as possible." It was pointed out that public agencies provide information regarding the origin of seeds in two ways. Many states certify seed, and their certificates show the variety and locality where grown as well as other information. The bureau of agricultural economics maintains a verified-origin seed service under which verified-origin labels are attached to seed containers which indicate in what state or states the seed was grown. Seed certified as to origin by the bureau is not certified as to variety or germination, but the verification sets up certain minimum standards of quality covering such factors as germination, purity, and noxious-weed-seed content.

Small Carry-Over
As for red-clover seed, the carry-over is "very small," production is much below the less-than-average production of last year, prices of domestic seed are high, imported seed is much lower priced, and the supply of adapted domestic seed is insufficient to meet normal requirements, the bureau reported. As with alfalfa, buyers of domestic red-clover seed may be protected by obtaining known-origin seed. State extension services, county agricultural agents, state and county farm organizations, seed shippers and dealers, and all agencies engaged in seed certification or verification work are urged to cooperate with the department of agriculture in discouraging the use of unadapted seed. Much information and careful handling of the whole problem are necessary, the bureau said.

Wisconsin Leads All Other States In Casein Output

Use of By-Product Has Increased Rapidly in Recent Years

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—More casein, by-product of cheese factories, creameries and other dairy processing plants, is produced annually in Wisconsin than in any other state in the nation, the department of agriculture and markets reported today.

Uses of casein have grown rapidly in recent years, until now the product is an important raw material in industry. Now casein is used in glazing paper, glues, paints, the printing of cotton cloth, and the manufacture of many articles, such as buttons, combs, handles and knobs, the department said. In 1936 Wisconsin produced about 34 per cent of the nation's output of casein, according to the crop reporting service of the Wisconsin and United States department of agriculture. With a total production of about 15,653,000 pounds, an all-time high point of production was reached in the state, and an increase of 30 per cent over 1935. Because casein is commonly made from skim milk, its manufacture follows the butter industry closely. In Wisconsin Clark, Chippewa, Fond du Lac, and Marathon counties led in the production of casein. Clark county made about 2,390,000 pounds, Chippewa, 1,330,000, Fond du Lac, 1,022,000, and Marathon, 957,000 pounds last year.

Figures for counties in the northeastern section: Brown, 96,000 pounds; Calumet 562,000; Door, 4,000; Kewaunee, 9,000; Manitowish, 46,000; Outagamie 171,000; Winnebago 239,000; Sheboygan, 241,000; Waupaca, 176,000; Shawano, 123,000 and Oconto 207,000 pounds.

Five Teams Attend Basketball Meeting

Two Others Say They Will Join Proposed Loop

MEET NEXT MONDAY

Kimberly and New London Clubs Will be Contacted

WITH five teams represented, two assuming that they'd join and two others considered possibilities, the first step toward organizing a county basketball league was taken at a meeting of interested persons last night at the Post-Crescent.

Teams represented at the meeting were Black Creek, by Wallace Sartorius; Company D, Appleton, by Norman Kneip; Little Chute, by Emil Van Dyke; Kaukauna Knights of Columbus by Jack Verbeten and Norbert Ber; and an Appleton team by Orville Wonsler. Telephone calls from Bill Row, Seymour, and Byron Baurin, Hortonville, assured that the two cities had teams while Kimberly and New London were reported as other possibilities.

It was decided to hold another meeting at 8 o'clock Monday evening, Nov. 15, at the Post-Crescent building in Appleton, at which time formal organization would take place and no team would be considered which wasn't represented.

The teams will be asked to submit names of possible referees, days on which they can have their respective halls or gymnasiums and a prospective player list. The franchise fee temporarily has been set at $10. It is hoped to start play the first week in December.

Several Teams Ready

Black Creek reported that it was all ready to go and would play games in the Black Creek auditorium. The squad will be limited to certain nights.

At Kaukauna the Knights of Columbus are sponsoring a team with the big problem being the gymnasium. The Knights would like to use the Kaukauna high school gymnasium and hope to make some arrangement this week.

Company D of Appleton has the army almost any night and has a squad organized and ready to play any time the league opens. The other Appleton team was represented by Orville Wonsler who said that his aggregation didn't have a sponsor but expected one in a few days. He intimated the team would try to play its games at the Y. M. C. A.

Little Chute is already for the season. The Legion again is backing the squad and furnishing the hall. A girls' team will be an extra attraction at the home games.

Byron Baurin, manager of the Hortonville Merchants team, said in a telephone conversation, that his club is ready for the season, has new uniforms and use of the Hortonville auditorium. Seymour was reported interested by Bill Row who said that a meeting had been held there and that the team could practically be counted in the loop.

It was reported that Kimberly probably would be represented at the next meeting and that New London was looking for a sponsor and would be heard from next week.

Oshkosh at Fond du Lac

Two final shots will be sounded in the Fox River Valley conference race this week, after which athletes and coaches will settle down to consideration of the all-conference picture and anticipation of the basketball season.

Prof. Ralph W. Agler, chairman of the board of control in charge of physical education at the university, announced in a formal statement that an investigation was under way.

Agler is the Michigan faculty representative on Western conference sports matters.

The Michigan Daily, university undergraduate publication, criticized the board in today's edition and Harry Kipke, head football coach, expressed the opinion the inquiry could have been delayed until the present season was over. Kipke added that as far as he knew the rumors were without foundation.

Rumor Subsidizing

Campus gossip was that Chicago and Cleveland alumni had subsidized football players in an attempt to restore Michigan to its former eminence in collegiate football. It was contended the current freshman football team possessed better material superior to the varsity.

Kipke issued the following statement: "I hope they investigate these rumors and that if they are true they are brought out into the open. As far as I know they are without foundation. The board could at least have waited until the football season was over. It's not fair to the boys. I can say this much, however: my skirts are clean."

Yost Silent

Athletic Director Fielding H. Yost withheld comment.

Michigan has won three conference games this season, all by a margin of one point. Last season it did not win any.

Professor Agler said the board will exert every effort to determine whether the rumors are substantiated and, if so, to fix the responsibility.

"If necessary," Agler said, "the board may declare candidates for varsity teams ineligible and place on them the burden of proving their support is of the character permitted by the conference rules."

The statement added: "Certain men against whom these rumors and charges appear, freshmen on the campus last year, have been dropped from the university, never having become academically eligible. The other men affected are now freshmen."

Sophomores May Win Positions on Big 10 Honor Team

None Have Been Placed on All Star Squad by Coaches Since 1934

BY WILLIAM WEEKES

CHICAGO (U.P.)—For the first time since 1934, there appears to be room for a sophomore or two on the Big Ten's all star football team.

Ed Widseth, Minnesota's great tackle and Merle Wendt, brilliant Ohio State end, were voted places on the "varsity" honor team by conference coaches three years ago, but no first year player was regarded as good enough in 1935 or 1936.

This year, Nile Kinnick, Iowa's sensational young quarterback, and Harold Van Every, another of the long line of fine Minnesota backs, are among the top candidates for places on the honor team. Both may benefit through the misfortune of players who made the team last year.

Both youngsters must maintain their swift paces, however, to beat out a lot of veteran competition. Just a few of the other backs who work has stamped them as contenders for all star honors are:

Offense Emphasized

In yesterday's drills offensive maneuvers were emphasized in most camps. Minnesota, preparing for its revenge bid against Northwestern, worked in secret on new plays. The crippled Wildcats were let off with a dummy scrimmage on offense and defense. Illinois was given new plays for use against Ohio State, while the Buckeyes were given a long session in both departments.

Wisconsin's varsity scored three touchdowns against the freshmen who used Purdue defensive formations, and Chicago's Maroons were given a workout on the offense. Coach Clark Shaugnessy plans to shoot at Illinois a week from Saturday. Shaugnessy also worked with the reserves who are expected to play most of the game against Beloit this week. Purdue devoted most of its period to perfecting a defense against Wisconsin plays.

Both Indiana and Iowa, which meet at Iowa City, concentrated on improving their defenses. Michigan's varsity polished a new set of offensive plays in preparation for its intersectional battle with Pennsylvania. At Notre Dame, the weary Irish varsity enjoyed another day of rest before starting a limited program of work for the Army game at New York.

Senior Volleyballers Try Out for Class Team

A senior volleyball team to represent the class in the Appleton High school tournament will be picked this week from four physical education classes. Captains of the four teams are Arens, Choudoir, Jensen and Pruett. Teams to represent the sophomore and junior classes have already been selected. The school title tournament will be held next week.

Juniors Win First Leg Of Badminton Tourney

Robert Morris and John Trautmann, junior champions, yesterday defeated C. Powers and B. Blacher, soph champs, in the first leg of the Appleton High school badminton title march. The junior challengers will meet Kay Rogers and Ben Pruett, senior champions, today for the school title.

Pro Loop Pass Efficiency Is 1 Per Cent Better Than 1936

FORWARD passing efficiency in the National Football league is one per cent better than it was last season when all teams totaled 30 per cent for a new record of effectiveness in this department, according to statistics released today.

In addition, three teams have completed more than 42 per cent of their passes, keeping ahead of the league record of 41 per cent.

There has been 494 passes completed out of 1318 tosses throughout the circuit this season. Washington is still leading the other clubs with 69 out of 158 for 43 per cent, while the Chicago Cardinals and Green Bay Packers are second and third, respectively, with 42.8 per cent and 42.3 per cent.

A new defensive record may be established this season by the New York Giants. At present this team has held opponents to 30 points and 979 yards in seven games. Opponents have averaged only 139 yards per game and if the New Yorkers can keep up this average they will end the season with only 1529 yards or less gained against them. The league record is 1578 yards made by the Cardinals in 1934.

Green Bay continues to lead in ground gaining and scoring with 2,377 yards and 177 points. Pittsburgh and Detroit are second and third in ground gaining with 2,001 and 1,942 yards. Detroit and Washington are second and third in scoring with 147 and points respectively.

LaCrosse Claims Title On Superior 'Forfeit'

La Crosse (U.P.)—Charging that Superior State Teachers college had failed to abide by the faculty committee's schedule of games, Coach Howard Johnson of La Crosse State teachers yesterday claimed the conference championship for his team on the ground that Superior "forfeited" a game scheduled to be played there Nov. 13.

Both Superior and La Crosse have won three games and lost none. La Crosse has one tie. Johnson said Superior's record should show one defeat from the "forfeit."

Johnson said Superior desired to change the date for the game because of "hazardous" weather conditions. The conference schedule, Johnson said cannot be changed unless by agreement. "No agreement was reached, so the schedule should stand," Johnson declared.

The La Crosse coach said La Crosse offered to play at Superior Nov. 11, 12 or 13.

Bear Creek Youth Drops 1st Bout in Nine Starts

Roger Norder, Bear Creek lightweight, lost the first of nine fights since joining the navy a year ago when he was kayoned in the second round by Al Grimes, all-Navy lightweight, San Pedro, Calif., Friday night.

"I was outclassed, that's all. No alibis; it was just a clean-cut K. O.," Norder said after the bout. Grimes will be out of the navy in January, and is reported to have decided to turn pro. He recently won the 135-pound coast title.

Norder was unimpaired by his defeat, and fights again in San Francisco next Saturday night. His eight previous victories cause navy fans to regard him as still very much of a comer.

Medwick Wins Player Award

St. Louis Cardinal Noses Out Hartnett for National League Honor

BY DREW MIDDLETON
NEW YORK—(AP)—Joe Medwick, the payoff guy for the St. Louis Cardinals, has been named the National League's most valuable player award for 1937 to add to his record string of batting "firsts."

"Muscles" did all he could to earn the prize. He won the batting championship, led in hits, runs batted in and doubles and tied with the Giants' Mel Ott for the home run title. Even so he barely nosed out Gabby Hartnett, the spirited Chicago catcher, who drew 68 votes to Joe's 70.

Eight members of the baseball writers' association made the selection. They gave Gabby more first-place nominations than Medwick, but Muscles more than made up the deficit with votes for second and third place to grab the award and the sporting news trophy.

374 Batting Average
During the past season, Medwick compiled a batting average of .374, he hit safely 373 times, batted 154 runs and hit 57 doubles and 31 home runs.

Carl Hubbell, the shrewd, smooth left-hander of the New York Giants, who won the award last year, was third choice with 52 points. Two newcomers to the headlines, the Boston Red Sox's rookie pitcher, Jim Turner and Lou Gehrig, wound up fourth and fifth. They edged out such well known players as Dick Bartell and Mel Ott of the Giants and Paul Waner of Pittsburgh.

In the balloting among the eight writers—one from each of the seven cities and one borough in the league—first place vote counted ten points, second nine, and so on for ten selections. Medwick drew two first-place nominations, Hartnett three.

Third Card to Win
Each was selected twice on a second-place ballot, but Medwick got four third-place nominations while Hartnett's votes were strung out, one each for third, fourth and sixth. Medwick, christened Joseph Michael but better known as "Ducky," wucky" or "muscles," is the third Cardinal to win the award since the baseball writers took over the selection in 1931. His manager, Frankie Frisch, was chosen in 1931. When he stizz was a great second baseman. Dizzy Dean, at the top of his pitching powers, took it in 1934.

A sensation as a schoolboy player at Carteret, N. J., Medwick came up via Scotland, Pa., in the Mid-Atlantic league and Houston of the Texas league. Starting in 1932, he has a six-year average just under .350. In his only world series appearance, in 1934, he hit for .379.

Baseball
A timely letter, he is unorthodox in that he hits consistently at bad balls. He swings right-handed with a pronounced wrist snap and hits on a line. Medwick will be 26 Nov. 24.

The baseball writers' committee which made the award included Joe Gannan, Boston American; Lee Scott, Brooklyn Citizen; Herbert Simons, Chicago Times; Frank Grayson, Cincinnati Times-Star; John Drebing, New York Times; Ivan Peterman, Philadelphia Bulletin; Ed Baling, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette; and J. Roy Stockton, St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The complete vote for the National League's most valuable player award:

Milwaukee—With the signing of four fighters, Matchmaker Roy that he has completed his card for the Milwaukee Sporting club's boxing show at the Auditorium Friday night. The show is headed by a 10-round bout between George Black and Oscar Rankins.

The two preliminary bouts will pit Jimmy Mason, Milwaukee, and Bobby Fadner, Madison, in the four round opener at 126 pounds. Baby Joe Gans, Milwaukee, will meet Roscoe Cobb, Phoenix, Ariz., in a six round bout at 160 pounds. Larry Greb, Milwaukee, and Orville Drouillard, Detroit, will fight in the eighth round semi-windup, while Al Schwartz and Wilbur Dunn, Fond du Lac, will mix in the six round main preliminary.

Black and Rankins each went through workouts at Mitchell's gym Tuesday. Black went through nine brisk rounds, while Rankins, handicapped by the lack of sparring partners, punched the bag and shadow-boxed for nine rounds.

After the workout, Rankins left for Chicago, where he will drill with several outstanding middle-

1936 Grid Champs Finding It Hard To Retain Titles

Only Duke Is in Favorable Position to Repeat as Conference Victor

BY BILL BONI
NEW YORK—(AP)—The football champions of a year ago are finding out it's a tough assignment to stay on top of the heap.

As the 1937 campaign draws to a close in the nation's seven major football conferences, only Duke, defending its Southern conference title, is in a favorable position to repeat.

With Eric (the Red) Tipton and Elmore (Honey) Hackney as holdovers from the 1936 outfit, the Blue Devils have won all seven of their conference games, but they face their biggest hurdle this week in North Carolina.

Nebraska Tolerating
Nebraska, no longer powerhouse by St. Francis and Lloyd Cardwell, is snapping stubbornly to keep its Big Six crown properly poised. But the huskers may be eliminated by too many ties—two many. They have been held even twice, won two and have one more to play. Kansas, with two to go, has won twice and been tied once.

Arkansas's Razorbacks, who won their first southwest conference title a year ago after losing it the year before by playing an ineligible man, may yet emerge as repeaters. But only a complete collapse by Rice and Baylor could bring that about.

Washington, Northwestern, Utah State and Louisiana State also are pretty much behind the eight-ball as far as repeating is concerned.

California, though tied by the coast champion huskies last Saturday, seems bound to finish on top of the pile this season and jump from there into the Rose Bowl.

Northwestern Out of Running
Northwestern is virtually out of the Big Ten race now, and is in for a further mess of trouble Saturday against Minnesota's conference leaders. The Gophers, tough at any time, have been aiming for a year at revenge for the Northwestern victory last season.

Utah State and Louisiana State also are laboring in the shadows of better-lit rivals. The Utes, who shared the Rocky Mountain title with Colorado in 1935 and won it outright in 1936, have found Colorado's all winning pace too fast this year. Alabama is top dog in the Southeastern circuit and should add to its stature at the expense of Georgia Tech.

Unofficial sectional pace-setters are having easier going. Pittsburgh, the Rose-Bowl winner; Yale, Penn and Dartmouth led the east a year ago, although all were beaten. But Yale, replaced by Fordham, are up there again. Santa Clara, non-conference ace of the west coast last year, still is riding high as one of the few major all-winning eleven.

ONWARD FOR NOTRE DAME: 50 Years of Irish Football Rockne Contributes His System; Notre Dame Teams Barnstorm U. S.

BY TOBY WIAIT
Copyright, 1937, The AP Feature Service
SOUTH BEND, Ind.—Under the late Knute K. Rockne, a shrewd strategist, master psychologist and one of the greatest showmen of all time, Notre Dame football teams soared to heights never touched before in gridiron history.

Notre Dame had 15 undefeated teams in Rockne's 13 years as coach. Three of his teams became "national champions." Three others won recognition as "western champions."

Rockne's teams rolled up the stunning total of 105 victories in 122 starts, losing 12 games and tying 5.

When he took charge at Notre Dame in 1918, Rockne not only wanted to produce great teams, but he wanted to gain for his alma mater a pre-eminent place in the football world.

He scheduled the most colorful teams in the country. He popularized intersectional games. His teams played from coast to coast and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf.

He injected sparkle into his team's play. He substituted whole teams at a time. His squads played an open, thrilling game that the spectators liked.

He became a target of those who contended football was being over-emphasized.

Football And Education
But Rockne told his critics, "this is the 20th century. The old order has changed. To limit a college education to books, classrooms and laboratories is to give education too narrow a meaning for modern times. The greatest contribution to education by the students themselves is the modern system of football."

Rockne's ideas paid Notre Dame large dividends. In 1930 the new $750,000 stadium was opened. Since 1923 the school has erected other buildings valued at $6,000,000, much of the money coming from football receipts.

He established certain methods of play which became known as the Rockne system.

Lightning Struck Everywhere
On offense his players lined up in a balanced formation. The ends, at a signal, leaped outward three yards. One of the backs also jumped out to a position behind an end. Two of the other backs formed a tandem on the same side, facing spaces between the offensive guard and tackle. The fourth back stood behind center, even with the second back in the tandem.

The Irish hit every point in the line, in every way, from this formation.

On defense Rockne's teams had seven men on the line, all preliminarily wide, but closing in as soon as the offense was set, until the Notre Dame tackles faced the offensive ends. The Irish ends varied from three to four yards out. The guards and center divided the intervening space, with the center on that side of the line of his opponent which would cause him to face the strong side of the backfield offensive formation.

Wonder Teams
Rockne's first national championship team, the 1924 squad, won 10 straight games, scoring 288 points to their opponents' 54. Among the victims were Army, Princeton, Georgia Tech, Carnegie Tech and Stanford.

Rockne's second national championship team, the 1929 aggregation, captured nine straight games, scoring 145 points to the opponents' 38. Notre Dame's third national championship, the 1930 squad and Rockne's last, took 10 consecutive battles, scoring 244 points to 78.

Rockne had a theory that touchdowns could be made easier from the middle than from inside the 20-yard marker. He called the area up to the 20-yard line a "zone of intense resistance."

His style of play, an open and spectacular game, usually resulted in long gains or no gains. He gamboled on the ability of his backs to get into the clear.

Rockne's system was responsible for Bucky O'Connor's 80-yard touchdown run against Southern California in 1930, a game the Irish won 27-0. Two weeks before, Notre Dame nosed out Army, 7-6 on Marchie Schwartz's 54-yard touchdown run and an extra point.

The Psychologist
A book could be written about Rockne's classic pep talks and use of psychology.

In 1925 Northwestern had the Irish 10-0 at the half. Rockne walked into the dressing room between halves and said nothing until just before play was to be resumed.

Then he blurted out, "You can have the honor of being the first Notre Dame team to quit. I'm through with you and will sit in the stadium the rest of the game."

His players went back and fought like mad. The play improved so much Rockne relented and came back to the bench. The Irish won, 13-10.

Rockne's death in a Kansas airplane crash March 31, 1931, was a staggering blow.

"Can Notre Dame Carry On?" was the big question in everyone's mind.

Battered Bays to Battle Eagles on Milwaukee Grid

Invaders are Led by Bill Hewitt, Former Bear End

GREEN BAY—Fresh from a 14 to 10 win over the Brooklyn Dodgers, the Philadelphia Eagles will be pitted against the pennant-bound Green Bay Packers in a National Professional League game at State Fair park in Milwaukee Sunday afternoon. The kick-off is scheduled for 2 p. m.

Led by that arch-enemy of the Packers, Big Bill Hewitt, the Eagles now believe they are prepared to joust on even terms with the tougher members of the pro circuit.

All-Star Candidate
Hewitt went to Philadelphia from the Chicago Bears this season as assistant coach and playing end, and his work with the Eagles seems to be producing results. Hewitt was a veteran nominee for all-pro league honors and is regarded as one of the greatest ends ever to wear a jersey.

The Packers will be slightly bruised and battered for the game after their great 24 to 14 victory over the Bears last Sunday, but with Trainer Dave Woodward and Physician Dr. W. W. Kelly working over time this week Hank Bruder will probably be the only doubtful starter Sunday. This will mean that Buckets Goldenberg with the blocking back duties, going back into the backfield after playing most of the season at guard.

Jankowski Going Good
Eddie Jankowski is all set to put on another show for his home town folk. There were many people who thought Jankowski was killed outright in the Bear game when he rammed head-on into a brick wall after scoring a touchdown on a 27-yard return of one of Buzz Buvide's passes. He elected to hit the wall instead of stepping out of bounds on the three-yard line, but as practically everyone on the Packer bench ran out to help him up Eddie bounced back to his feet, threw the ball down on the ground and looked at the wall to see what kind of an impression he had made on it.

Stromel and Stanley Palcich: Lawrence Blaisdell and W. W. Jacquot versus Werner Witte and Clem Ketchum; Marvin Heiden and Roy McNeil versus Ed Tourtelotte, Menasha, and Tom Mullen; George Klein and William Stark versus Paul Zapfe and Melvin Krueser; Rev. J. B. Hanna and Dr. J. Young versus Frans Larson and Franklin Jesse.

Tunney's Manager Said To be Living Soft Life

BY EDDIE BRIETZ
NEW YORK—(AP)—The fine-looking youngster playing center for Dartmouth's undefeated Indians is the son of Billy Gibson, the old fight manager, who piloted both Benny Leonard and Gene Tunney to world championships.

... Like Max Schmeling, Tunney was a good business man and often preferred to sign his own contracts. ... More than once he left a boiling Gibson sitting in the anteroom while Gene closed for important fights. ... But when he came into the big dough, Tunney didn't forget. ... If you believe the stories told in the Broadway spots, Gene did so well by Gibson that all Billy has to do these days is doze in the sun at the Polo Grounds in the summer and drop into Leonard's joint for a spot or two of ale in the winter.

And Dan Caplin, another New York fight manager, has a son who is coping about all the scholastic honors in sight down at the University of Virginia. ... Jimmy Kelly, the Greenwich village night club king, planned to bid as high as $20,000 for the Chief when the C. Y. Whitney string was placed on sale Monday. ... Jimmy forgot the date of the sale and was he burned up yesterday when he read Earl Sande, the former jock, had bought the Chief for $14,100. ... Old Jack Johnson is making daily appearances at Prof. Hubert's dime museum on 42nd street.

Chicago—(AP)—William "Torchy" Peden, and his brother, "Doug," held the lead today in Chicago's semi-annual six-day bicycle race.

The Victor, E. C. pair, turned on the heat last night with the biggest drive of the race so far and held a one lap lead over four other teams. "Torchy" Peden has won 30 six-day races during his cycling career.

The four teams trailing the Peden boys by a lap as the race went into the third day were: Kilian Vogel, Janet-Diot, Walthour-Crossley and Rodman-Wals.

17 St. Mary School Gridders to Receive Letters at Banquet

Kaukauna — Seventeen St. Mary grade school footballers will receive letters at a banquet Monday, Nov. 22. Coach Jack Licht announced this morning. The team enjoyed one of the most successful seasons in its history, sweeping their first seven games before dropping the last two. Their final game of the year Sunday against Annunciation of Green Bay resulted in a 42-0 loss, with the heavier Green Bay line, averaging 135 pounds, outclassing the Kaukauna lightweights.

Most of the Green Bay tallies were scored by means of a strong running attack. St. Mary's had six first downs compared to seven for Annunciation. Licht's men completed eight of fourteen passes against four of eleven for Green Bay. The first casualty of the season was sustained by St. Mary's when John Ryan broke his arm.

Prospects for next year look only fair, according to Coach Licht, as but five of the seventeen lettermen will return.

Another vocal selection, "Roses of Picardy," by Jeanette O'Donnell, and a reading, "What Americans Believe In," by John Duffy, will follow. Earl Treptow, R. Hooymann, Junior Swedberg, Junior Veltic and Clifford Femal, buglers, will sound taps. During taps, the audience will rise and bow their heads in silence.

Player Could Have Made Game by Saving Entries

Mr. Culbertson is conducting, through this column, a national examination of bridge players. Rate yourself by subtracting from 100 the points for each wrong answer.

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Yesterday's question was as follows:

Question 37: You are West, declarer, at a four spade contract in rubber bridge. Opponents made no bid. Your hand and dummy are as follows:

WEST	EAST (Dummy)
♠ A Q 8 5 4	♠ 7 6 3 2
♥ A 8 6 2	♥ K 7 5
♦ 7 3	♦ A K 4
♣ A 5	♣ 6 3 2

North opens the diamond queen. How do you play the hand?

Answer: Win in dummy. Lead the spade deuce and go up with ace from the closed hand. You must lose one heart and one club. Your only problem then is to avoid the loss of two trump tricks. The play of the ace is a safety play against North's possible holding of the blank king. If you finesse to the queen and lose to the singleton king, you still must lose another trick to South. If South's holding was the K x, you have thrown away only the unimportant over-trick by failure to finesse. If South originally held K x x you have lost nothing by the safety play. Obviously, after playing the spade ace, if the king does not fall, you must generate dummy and lead another spade toward your queen. (One point demerit for failure to make this safety play.)

TODAY'S QUESTION

Question 38: Both sides vulnerable. You are South, the dealer, and hold:

♠ No ♠ AK1084 ♦ K J107 ♣ J943

The bidding proceeds:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass

What call do you make now?

TODAY'S HAND

Match-point duplicate. West, dealer. Neither side vulnerable.

NORTH	EAST
♠ K 8 6	♠ J 9 2
♥ A 9 5	♥ K 7
♦ K J 5	♦ K 10 3
♣ K 6 4 3	♣ A J 8 7 2

WEST	EAST
♠ 10 5	♠ J 9 2
♥ Q 10 8 4 3 2	♥ K 7
♦ A 9 6	♦ K 10 3
♣ 9 5	♣ A J 8 7 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 club	Pass
2 hearts	2 spades	Pass	Pass
3 hearts	3 spades	Pass	Pass

West opened the club nine and dummy ducked. East, marking declarer for the queen-10, went up with the ace and returned a low club, hoping that the nine was a singleton. Declarer's queen held, however, and three rounds of spades drew the outstanding trumps. Then, apparently in a dither to get rid of his losing heart, declarer entered dummy with the heart ace to discard the heart jack on the club king. Whatever the "reason," the play was declarer's undoing. Obviously there was no danger of losing a heart trick while the ace remained in dummy, and by his haste declarer had landed in the wrong hand and, thereby, lost a vital tempo. Now in order to lead a diamond toward dummy's double honor he would have to waste one of his two remaining trumps. He realized (too late) that this would be fatal, hence attempted to build a diamond trick by leading dummy's queen.

Had East been foolish enough to cover declarer would have won back the trick he had lost. East made no such mistake, however. He properly waited for the second diamond honor. West won with the ace and led heart. Obviously there now was no chance to establish a diamond trick, since East lay over dummy's jack-5 with the king-10, and declarer was down to one trump.

If declarer, after drawing trumps, had properly conserved his entries by leading a diamond toward dummy he would have made his contract with ease.

TOMORROW'S HAND

Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH	EAST
♠ K Q 10 5	♠ J 7 6 2
♥ 6 3	♥ 7 2
♦ K 8 5 2	♦ J 6 3
♣ 10 7 6	♣ 9 5 4 2

Mr. Culbertson will discuss this hand in tomorrow's article.

GOOD TASTE TODAY

BY EMILY POST

Dear Mrs. Post: Several weeks ago a bride-to-be wrote that there were five hundred names on the wedding invitation list, and rather than omit any one of them she wanted you to say that every one in the family could help to write the invitations. I wonder if your answer to this was as disappointing to her as it was to me. (I have the same problem staring me in the face.) You said a handwritten note of invitation implies a gathering of intimate friends and relatives, which you said might perfectly well be true in her own case. And you also reminded her that five hundred people usually meant only about two hundred notes. Only! Mrs. Post, did you ever try writing two hundred notes all by yourself especially when time is a real factor. While I had not expected that you would approve of each one of her family writing personal notes of invitation in her name, I thought you might suggest that they write the formally worded invitation which is usually engraved. Did you mean to overlook this form, or would it be positively bad taste to write it?

Answer: Two hundred notes when "time is a factor" would be impossible. I agree—especially since such notes may NOT be typewritten. Third person notes could of course be written by any one and so could, if necessary, say: "Sat. Nov. 6 wedding at 3 o'clock." I have never heard of an invitation like this but it breaks no rule when the excuse is "necessity" — which seems to be the case in point.

Dear Mrs. Post: Is turkey an appropriate dish to serve at a wedding breakfast, and if so, in what form?

Answer: It is not usual but would be entirely appropriate, sliced if cold, or made into salad. If to be served hot, I would suggest Newburg, or croquettes or fine creamed mince, or in pastry shells.

Dear Mrs. Post: If neither of the groom's parents is living, do you think it would be kind to ask his sisters to help receive at the wedding reception since they will be strangers to most of the guests.

Answer: Under the circumstances, decidedly yes.

Dear Mrs. Post: So many of the wedding guests will be here from a distance, and for this reason Mother thinks it would be a good idea to have the wedding presents sent to the club at which we are receiving, and put on display there. Dad thinks this is a lot of unnecessary expense and trouble and says he has never heard of it anyway. Will you give us your opinion.

Answer: Personally I agree with your father. On the other hand, there is no reason why you may not do this if you are willing to pack and move, unpack and arrange them—all of which seems to me too much of a task on such an overbusy day as that of the wedding. As a rule, presents are arranged and arranged a few pieces at a time as they are received—and even this takes time and fussing to place each to best advantage.

Colorful Costumes Add to Excitement of Ice Sports

BY ELSIE PIERCE

Maybe there's some truth in the saying "He who has—gets." For she who is healthy and vigorous enough to indulge in winter sports gets that much more health (to say nothing of the fun) out of it. And the winter sport season will soon be here.

The thrill of donning skates or skis, of cutting the ice or sailing in space! The exhilarating, exciting experience, the pink glow in one's cheeks, the sparkle in one's eyes, the smile on one's lips! Winter sports are as zestful as that. Indoor rinks are fine, if you cannot manage to get your sports outdoors, but the open air exercise is the preferred stock, of course. Sun sparkling on snow-capped mountains, a slush of snow and green and purple and black. And—this year—exciting, colorful costumes that vie with Nature's colors. Green with mauve or fuchsia; beetroot with gray; slate blue and red. One feels so bright and gay and glad to be alive.

Protection—Please!

If the color and color of winter sports costumes help to encourage participation in the sports themselves, they serve their purpose.

well. Some of the costumes go further. The ski outfit, for instance, expose so little of the body that a minimum of protection is necessary. I'd suggest compiling a special sports kit, however. A protective body oil or lotion—softening and soothing to use after the bath and again before going outdoors. A greaseless hand lotion is an absolute necessity and the legs might get a little lick and promise with it too. Another must foundation cream or lotion which plays a double role—protecting the skin against wind and weather and at the same time increasing the lasting qualities of make-up. These come in color to match the accompanying powder. Water-proof rouge lipstick and mascara should be a sports favorite. Nails don't show much under their warm-as-toast mittens or gloves but when they do come out in the open it's nice to have them matching rouge and lipstick—all one happy family. Lip pomade, by the way, for lips that chap easily. And don't forget the eye lotion—and the eye goggles (those you wore at the beach last summer, because sun on snow is quite as glaring as sun on sand).

Nagging Relative Makes Life Miserable for Child

BY ANGELO PATRI

Katherine was long and thin and awkward and felt her deficiencies keenly. Her posture was undoubtedly bad. To hide herself and keep down her height, she bent over and stooped down until in truth she might be called a "miserable looking object." But when Aunt Lizzie pounced upon her and let her have that truth full in the face with those other girls present, it was more than the child could bear and she stamped her foot and shouted, "You miserable old thing, I hate you!" and then rushed off to hide and cry.

When mother got back from her shopping trip Aunt Lizzie told how she had been affronted, and asked what in the world was going to be done to rescue this girl from complete failure in every respect. Aunt Lizzie was excited about it, especially about her own hurt feelings. "I've tried so hard to help that child, done everything possible for her and that is what I get for it. Tells me to my face that she hates me. Very well, I'm through. I'll never speak to that child again as long as she and I both shall live."

Katherine, listening up in her room, heaved a long sigh. "If only she meant it," she murmured. "What a break for me."

Father heard all about it when he was resting after dinner. He listened in silence and then he said, "Well, mother, I've been hearing Lizzie after that child now for some time back. She never comes into the room where the child is without saying something about how she looks or how she stands, or how she speaks. The child is never right. Human flesh can't stand it. I've been wondering how it would do to let the child go down and stay with Louise a month. Just for a change from Lizzie's eternal nagging. Get her ready tomorrow."

"But John—"

"No, I've been thinking about this for a long time. You get that child ready and I'll take her down tomorrow. She's got to have a chance to feel free to breathe. We can't put Lizzie out of the house, but we can take Katy out of it."

When Aunt Louise met Katherine at the door she was smiling brightly, her hands outstretched to welcome her. "How pretty your hair is. Who did it for you? You must have broken the bank for the beauty parlor lady, eh?"

"No, indeed. I did my hair myself," said Katherine, and the way her head went up and her shoulders lifted gladdened her father's heart.

For a long glad month Katherine glowed in the sunshine of her Aunt's praise and encouragement. She was still thin, still awkward, but she carried herself much better, and the presence of one so pleased with herself and the rest of the world.

Father arrived to take her home, and for the first time a shadow crossed the child's face. "I'll be glad to see mother. But Aunt Lizzie—"

My Neighbor Says—

The temperature of the modern house is too hot for the growing of geraniums in the house, and the air too dry. They should be kept in a cool place where there is plenty of moisture in the air. The kitchen window is a good place because the steam from the cook stove provides them with just enough moisture. East and west windows are best.

When separating the yolks from the whites of eggs break them over a funnel and the whites will pass through, leaving the yolks in the funnel.

It is always a good plan to place the piano a few inches from the wall of a room, especially if it is against a damp outside wall. The dampness coming through often runs the tone of an instrument.

To prevent cornmeal mush from lumping during the cooking mix the uncooked meal with cold water, using 1-3 as much water as meal and then add the boiling water and cook in a double boiler.

To clean satin slippers rub them well with gasoline and a clean, soft cloth. If not very much soiled, rub with art gum.

Change the stove covers on the front of the stove to the back when they turn a reddish-brown and repeat this from time to time as they get red. A good stove polish will keep covers well blackened.

SURE TO PLEASE AT CHRISTMAS

At Trafalgar square I also saw a great number of pigeons. These birds are very tame, and will eat bread or other food which people hold in their hands. I observed one of them alight on the shoulder of a young woman.

If you ask a person how to reach a certain place, you are likely to get a reply something like this: "Walk to the bottom of this street. Then turn right and carry on about two minutes." To get to another place, you may be told to go to the "top" of the street—in other words, to the upper end.

Many London streets have queer names. I am thinking of such streets as Petticoat Lane, Haymarket, Threadneedle street, Birdcage Walk, and Pudding Lane.

Pudding Lane is in a part of London where there used to be many shops selling special things on each street. In the same district is Bread street, which at one time was a center for bakers and bread-sellers.

Riddles, games and puzzles will be found in the "Funmaker" leaflet. If you would like a copy send a 3c stamped, return envelope to me in care of this newspaper.

Companionship Is Thing That Counts in Marriage

BY DOROTHY DIX

A correspondent asks: "Would you advise a man to marry a sensible, domestic girl who would keep religiously within the limits of her budget and make a good working partner, even though she did not thrill him; or marry his dream girl, the girl who sets his pulses racing, the girl he wants to take out every night, even though she can't boil water without scorching it, and thinks a budget is something that you manipulate with a can-opener?"

"Personally," he continued, "I believe a marriage would be much happier where the husband took his wife in his arms every night and told her of his love than where he sat across the table and discussed his business plans with her and they added up the savings bank accounts together. In other words, I don't believe you can have your cake and eat it, too, so far as a wife is concerned. I don't believe true love and congenial companionship can exist at the same time."

DOROTHY DIX

A famous neurologist, most of whose patients have been run crazy by their mates, said to me the other day that the only solution of the matrimonial problem was for every man to have two wives and every woman two husbands. One wife to be a good cook; one husband to be a Fairy Prince and the other a go-getter and money-maker.

This arrangement would answer my correspondent's question as to whether it is better to use your head or your heart in picking out a life partner, as it would enable you to have both a parlor ornament and a kitchen utensil. However, there are practical objections to it that make the plan unfeasible. For one thing, in these days of the high cost of living, wives are a luxury and few men can afford more than one at a time. And, Heaven knows, one husband is hard enough for a wife to keep her eye on without acquiring antagonism trying to watch two. Hence the polygamous stuff is out.

So this brings the matter back to the original proposition as to whether it is better to marry romantically or sensibly. If all marriage was based on the short-term Hollywood plan, I would be strong for the thrills and root for the dream girl. It must be a grand and glorious sensation for a man to see heaven in a woman's eyes; to palpitate at her touch and have chills and hectic fevers at the very sound of her footsteps. It must give a man a wonderful kick to be so much in love that he throws prudence, caution and common sense to the winds; along with his stomach and his pocketbook, and asks only the privilege of gazing at his living picture and buying new and expensive frames for her.

But, alas and alack, marriage is for the long pull and it seems so much longer to a man if he gets a yoke mate who can't, or won't, pull her share of the load. Worst still, thrills are as evanescent as dew on the grass. A man loses his ability to palpitate long before he loses his hair. He no more grows hot and cold at the sight of his wife than he gets excited over an all-day sucker.

Now when he comes home tired and hungry at night is he moved to ask his wife in a pleading tones if she loves him. What he wants to know is if dinner is ready.

The sad, sad truth is that we cannot carry romantic love over into our middle age any more than we can the illusions of our youth. So it is folly for a man to marry in the belief that any woman can keep stirring his pulses for thirty or forty years. Habit, familiarity, the slow down of his own blood all preclude that.

He who marries a woman who has intelligence, strength and stamina—who has fought the battle shoulder to shoulder with him; who has given him love and loyalty and sympathy and understanding, he will know the reality of happy marriage, and he will cling closer and closer to her long after he would have wearied of an old thriller and gone in search of a new one.

The thing that counts most in marriage, the only thing that can keep love alive in marriage is com-

Hollywood News And Gossip

BY ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood Glamor-on-the-hoof runs into money in Hollywood. The sheer silk stockings that sheathes a shapely calf is the most expensive single item in a screen star's wardrobe.

The girls figure they spend from $50 to $65 on shin draperies for each pair of shoes . . . and shoes don't last very long either.

A glamor girl of the film world as soon do a Lady Godiva on the Boulevard as appear in public with a run in her stocking.

The sandal season brings greatest worries. Bette Davis, during this time, never wears a pair of sheers more than twice because she's afraid of runs. When she steps out formally in lace-tied chignon hose, she carries a set of spares in her evening bag—and she's not the only one.

Kay Francis is particularly about hoisery color, selecting stockings for harmony as carefully as she does a hat. Our wardrobe spies report the Francis stocking supply unusually large because she insists they match the color scheme of both shoes and dress.

Rough-on-hose Joan Blondell, a lively tomboy as a kid, snags, pulls or tears an average of three pairs a week.

Olivia de Havilland counts hoisery her big extravagance. The lady kind for evening and tissue-sheer chignons for daytime.

Use a flashlight for hunting things in dark closets. Lighted tapers or matches may prove disastrous.

Uncle Ray's Corner

The Streets of London

Going along the streets of London, a visitor notices many things. Traffic moves on the left side, as elsewhere in England. There are taxicabs of a queer-looking, old-fashioned kind. There are many small ("bobby") cars, and some large ones, used by business men who drive back and forth to work. Hundreds of buses speed on their way, and bicycles mix with the larger vehicles.

"Many of our Bobbies are university graduates," an Englishman said to me. "They are honest, and cannot be bribed. A person who tried to bribe one of them would quickly be placed under arrest."

Walking to Trafalgar square, in the heart of London, I saw a great statue of Lord Nelson. Around it are statues of lions, said to have been molded from iron obtained by melting cannon.

At Trafalgar square I also saw a great number of pigeons. These birds are very tame, and will eat bread or other food which people hold in their hands. I observed one of them alight on the shoulder of a young woman.

Chapter 38
Three Chapters
Neill thought back over his conversation with Miss Rayner as far as he could remember it. Who had introduced Fanning to Miss Rayner? Her estate agent, Barney Neill had never given a second thought to Barney, because Miss Rayner had made it clear that Barney was not implicated in the plot. However, Barney might be the cat's-paw. Miss Rayner had spoken of him a little slightly, suggesting that Barney was one whom she "didn't tell anything to."

It was worth looking into, and Neill got busy. Barney might be implicated, and anyhow that had followed on it that day would make him cautious. Neill resolved to find out something about the man before going to look at him. He got his office address out of the telephone book.

Neill expected to be followed when he left the hotel and so he walked through the streets in order to get a line on his trail. Neill was an experienced tracker himself, and also adept in following. At first he could only spot two of them, one on each side of the street behind. From their appearance, he judged them to be Baltimore city detectives. They didn't look very bright.

After he had gone a few blocks he discovered that there was a third man interested in his movements. He was of an entirely different type from the other two and had no connection with them. He was watching them as well as Neill. This was a puzzling surprise. Who but Bonnier could possibly know of his trip to town?

The third man was young, strongly built, yet had an unhealthy look, his face being ashy pale and his eyes red-rimmed. He wore spectacles that looked almost as if it had been peroxidized, and a heavy blond mustache. Altogether a queer looking guy. Suddenly it came to Neill that he had seen the fellow with Bonnier. Making a regular business of following him, it seemed. How could he have known that Neill was going to return?

Edward Barney, the estate agent, maintained a small office in an old building on a side street off Charles. When Neill opened the door, a black-haired man with protuberant eyes distorted by thick lenses arose to meet him. That was all that Neill wanted. He immediately backed out muttering something about making a mistake. It was the fellow with Bonnier!

Losing Two Trailers
Thereafter for several hours Neill, according to the methods he had learned in the department, went about town picking up little scraps of information about Edward Barney, and piecing them together.

Barney, it appeared, led an exemplary life. Lived with his wife and two children in a neat little house on the edge of Roland park. Mrs. Barney wore the trousers, it was said, and she being an ardent prohibitionist, Barney was forced to indulge his taste for an occasional glass away from home.

Neill led his trailers back and forth around town, out to Roland park and back again. As yet he had no object in trying to shake them. He wanted his movements reported to Bonnier. When he went into Miller's for his supper they sat at other tables in the place. The two detectives were entirely unaware of the peroxidized young man, but he was on to them.

After supper Neill entered the Belvedere hotel. One detective followed him in, the other remaining

New Attendance Record Is Set at Farmers' Program

Audience Packs Auditorium for Annual Rotary Club Event

New London—The fourteenth annual Farmers' Night party continued to new heights in attendance as very close to 1,000 farmers and their families thronged the Washington High school for the event last night. Between 800 and 900 came last year to set a new attendance mark, but last night was a long step from the first group of 50 with which the program originated.

Dr. F. J. Pfeiffer, program chairman, presented a program which apparently pleased the audience that packed the auditorium. Extra chairs were placed in front and in the aisles to accommodate all the guests but many sat on the steps in the balcony and others crowded standing room at the rear.

After the stage program, two reels of motion pictures on the humorous and serious sides of farm life were shown and dancing was held in the gymnasium. As guests entered the building they were given small slips of paper on which to write their name and pin on their clothes to make introductions easy at the informal mixer.

Lunch Is Served
The climax of the party, as with most parties, was the serving of lunch. Food was laid out in tables the length of the gym and Rotarians and their wives filled plates and poured coffee for nearly an hour to a steady column of hungry guests. The hosts were still serving when Tuesday passed into Wednesday.

The high school band under Director M. S. Zahrt opened the program but vacated their places soon after the introduction to provide seats for the visitors. Henry Spearbraker, chairman of the refreshment committee, also led the community singing. Dr. F. J. Murphy, president of the New London Rotary club, addressed the group briefly.

A skit "Cheese It" by the high school dramatics class had in the cast, Marjorie Miller, Louis Garrow, Eileen Meshke, Cordell Myers, June Norris, Marjorie Monroe and Paul Knapstein. The high school male quartet sang to the accompaniment of Miss Mary K. Donohue, director of vocal work.

Herb Runge of Shawano entertained with a bit of parlor magic and humorous dialogue. Scotty Brier of Oshkosh played a varied selection of songs on the banjo.

The Rotarians were assisted by their wives and high school faculty members in the gigantic task of satisfying the hunger of the large crowd.

The Rotary committees responsible for last night's event were headed by L. M. Warner, general chairman.

outside. The blond young man was not visible at the moment. Neill evaded the detective by making a quick turn through the corridors and coming back to another opening into the lobby, watched, partly concealed, to see what the man would do. The detective was standing in the lobby looking around for Neill. He started towards the doorway where Neill was concealed. At that moment the blond young man came in from the street. He overtook the detective and Neill heard him ask:

"Say, are you trailing a tall young man in a gray suit?"
The detective answered: "What is it to you?"

"Nothing at all, only I was coming up Charles street just now and I saw you following him."

"Well, what about it?"
"I just wanted to tell you that I saw him come out of the barber shop entrance on Charles street a minute ago. He hopped a taxi."

"Much obliged," said the detective, hastily. Neill, looking out, saw him beat it out of the door. He picked up his partner outside, and they made off quickly. From inside the door the blond young man was watching them with a grin. Neill thought: Well, I'll be damned! ... What's his game?

In the Belvedere bar Neill ran into a croup of Barney's whom he had been told that he would find there. From him he learned that Barney was accustomed, on his way home every afternoon, to drop in for a glass of beer at Heinrich's a little cafe in the Falls road. This was the essential piece of information he had been after.

It was a long way from the Belvedere hotel. Neill took a taxi, and the blond young man another. Falls road proved to be a miscellaneous sort of street leading to aristocratic Roland park. It was lined by small stores, little frame houses occupied by colored washerwomen, and so on. Heinrich's was a neat, new saloon with mahogany panels in the show window and neon beer signs. No view of the interior could be had from the street.

Neill went in. The blond young man didn't follow him in, but when the swing shutter opened, Neill could see him hovering outside, trying to get a look in. The place was moderately well filled. Neill could hear that the conversation was all about the Fanning case, and the death of Miss Rayner. He did not attempt to join the general group, but waited at the far end of the bar to be served.

A Real Clue, At Last
Heinrich was the typical German beer-seller enveloped in a vast white apron. Neill said to him: "Terrible thing about the death of the old lady today."

"You said it, mister."

"Follow downtown told me that it was Edward Barney who first introduced Prescott Fanning to Miss Rayner."

"No!" exclaimed Heinrich. "Why Mr. Barney is a good customer of mine."

the dark ships

"Is that so?" Neill made believe to look over the group of drinkers. "Is he here now?"

"No, he drops in afternoons around 5:30."

"Well, don't say anything about it. Maybe there is nothing in it."

"You're right."

"But it would be a funny note, wouldn't it, if Barney and Fanning met right here?"

"Prescott Fanning's never been in here, mister. I've seen his photograph and heard him described. He's a man you wouldn't mistake."

"Maybe Barney met some friend of Fanning's here—a go-between, sort of."

"Mr. Barney has his own friends here every day. I can't recollect him talking to a stranger. I don't get many strangers way out here."

"Think back. It would be quite a stunt if you and me could turn up something new in this big case. Have a beer with me."

Heinrich drew a beer and sipped it thoughtfully. Life was attracted by the suggestion of publicity for himself, and lowered his voice confidentially. "I do mind a stranger meeting up with Mr. Barney in here," said he slowly. "Maybe he was in a couple of times."

"Did he pick up Barney here the first time?" asked Neill eagerly.

"No, you could see Mr. Barney knew him before."

"What like man?"
Heinrich shook his head heavily. "I can't remember."

"Was he a big fellow?"
"No."

"A little fellow?"
"Just medium like."

"Was he a young man?"
"No. He wasn't old neither. Just average age."

"How was he dressed?"

"I didn't notice special. Just like anybody else."

Neill, discouraged, tried another line. "What did they drink?"

Heinrich's eyes brightened immediately. "I can remember that, mister. Mr. Barney, he had his beer as usual, but the stranger he ordered a drink that was new to me. A rum Collins he called it. Made just like an ordinary Collins, but with rum instead of gin. It's a good drink. I have offered it to some of my other customers and they like it."

"Now we're getting somewhere."

said Neill. "There must have been some talk about this new drink. Can you repeat it?"

"Sure. The stranger tells me how to mix it. He mentions that he had a client who was a banana importer, and he was able to get in rum on his ships."

Here was a real clue at last. "Good!" said Neill. He grinned and drank off his beer. Beer had never tasted better to him.

BY WALTER LIPPMAN

The March of Fascism and the Parties of the Left

It is evident that Mussolini has not joined the Nazis and the Japanese in an anti-communist pact because communism has suddenly become more formidable than it was a year ago. All the evidence indicates that the Comintern is in retreat and that Soviet Russia has lost influence both in Europe and in Asia. But what has happened is that Japan, Italy and Germany, each in its sphere of expansion, are moving rapidly from the phase of mobilization and propaganda among their own people into the phase of forcible action to achieve their imperial ambitions.

The anti-communist pact is a useful and ingenious instrument of these ambitions. It provides each of these powers with a plausible pretext for intervention; it helps to paralyze the resistance of their prospective victims; it serves to distract and confuse the policy of Britain, France and the United States; it insures to each of the fascist states the more or less active assistance of the two others.

Thus the anti-communist pact is not primarily a defense against the spread of communism, but a device for the promotion of fascist imperialism. That this is the fact may be seen by noting that Tokyo, Berlin and Rome invariably find communism most menacing at those points where the resistance to their imperialism is greatest. Thus Japan has not attacked communist Russia, but nationalist China. Italy has intervened in Spain, a country of minor importance in the constitution of Europe but of absolutely first importance in respect to the strategic position of Britain, France and Italy. The German thunder is directed against Czechoslovakia, of all the countries of central Europe the most democratic and the least likely to be bolshevized. But Czechoslovakia holds the strategic key to the imperial expansion of Germany into the Danube valley and the Ukraine.

Class War Important Factor in Developments

The anti-communism of Tokyo, Berlin and Rome would not be the effective instrument which it is if the bolshevik spirit were not in fact an important influence in the great democracies and in the countries against which the fascists are directing their attack. The heart of "communism," outside of Soviet Russia, is not the planned economy and the collectivized industries which have cast such a spell upon the minds of western progressives. Outside of Russia the heart of so-called communism is the class war waged not alone by professed communists but by all kinds of socialists, trades unionists, humanitarians.

There can be little doubt that in the western democracies the parties of the Left are now imbued with the philosophy and the spirit of the class war. This philosophy and this spirit, rather than the specific measures of reform, are the reason why the conservative classes are today as sympathetic as they are to the fascist advance. Normally, the conservatives in Great Britain, in France and in America would be the first to resist the spread of fascist imperialism. It is they, rather than the parties of the Left, who would normally be concerned about such things as Gibraltar, Minorca and Suez, Ethiopia, Czechoslovakia, northern China, and Shanghai. But the parties of the Right feel themselves to be the objects of a class war by the parties of the Left. So they submit to aggression abroad because they fear it so much at home.

Tokio, Berlin and Rome are shrewd and well advised when they believe that their imperialism will not be resisted as long as they can exploit the distractions and divisions arising from the class war within the democratic countries. As long as the parties of the Left preach and practice the class war, there will be no united front within the democracies or among the democracies.

Internal Division Can't Be Healed by Concessions

Since the parties of the Left are stronger at the polls than the parties of the Right, the responsibility is theirs. Though there is no doubt that a far-reaching reduction of the privileges of the conservative class is to be undertaken, the peace merely by making concessions. As long as the Left is committed to the principle of the class war, the internal division of the democracies cannot be healed by concessions. It can be healed only if the concessions are made in return for a convincing renunciation of the spirit of this class war.

From this point of view the leadership of the Left comprise the New Dealers in America, the followers of M. Blum in France, the Labor party in Britain, together with the greater part of the intellectuals in all countries. That they are aroused by real social evils no one in his senses would deny. That they are opposed by darkly reactionary forces is evident. But the paramount fact is that the Left movement is today essentially illiberal and undemocratic in spirit and method, that the animating spirit of the movement as a whole is the enmity of the class struggle.

The inevitable consequence of that enmity is the internal paralysis of the democracies in the presence of the fascist advance.

Leaders of the Left Must Make Their Choice
The leaders of the Left men like Mr. Roosevelt, M. Blum, Major Attlee and Sir Stafford Cripps, as well as journals such as, for example, The New Republic and the Nation here, must soon decide whether they prefer the class struggle at home or a resistance to the advance of fascist imperialism.

throughout the world. They cannot escape that choice. They must decide whether they wish to oppose organized fascism or to continue harrying the economic royalists in the spirit of class war.

They must decide whether they will return to the spirit of liberal democracy or whether they will use the machinery of voting to create electoral majorities in order to impose the ideals of the Left. Until they have made that decision, the doctrine but the temper of the Marxian class struggle, their eloquent tirades against fascism will continue to be so much empty and self-deluding rhetoric.

They will continue to paralyze the democracies. They will continue to divide them. They will continue to provoke the reaction which will in the end destroy the Left completely.

About 7,000 foreign visitors from some 60 countries are expected. Four languages—French, German, Spanish, and English—have been designated as official for the presentation and discussion of scientific papers and in publishing the proceedings. The chairman of the national executive committee is

James E. Rice, of Trumansburg, N. Y., and the general secretary is D. Termohlen, United States Department of Agriculture.
